Governor-Elect Plaisted Thanks the Boston American

AUGUSTA, Me., Sept. 13, 1910.

To the Editor of the BOSTON AMERICAN:

I wish to thank the AMERICAN for its work in my behalf and for the people of this State. The AMERICAN certainly contributed in a great measure to the great victory.

(Signed) FREDERICK W. PLAISTED.

More than ordinary prominence was given to the political campaign just closed in Maine by BOSTON AMERICAN because there were no large Democratic newspapers in that State to give to the public the Democrats' side of the controversy, and because of the further fact that the campaign fought by the Democrats and Independents was part of the national revolt against bossism.

The Maine editions of the BOSTON AMERICAN which circulated extensively through that State served to crystalize the sentiment which resulted in the overthrow of the Republican machine that has held sway there for more than a generation.

Fred Emery Beane, chairman of the Democratic State Committee of Maine, in a statement made to-day at Hallowell, credited the BOSTON AMERICAN with having been a a strong contributing cause to the result.

"I am feeling pretty well over the result of the election," said Mr. Beane. "I have not had time to analyze the situation thoroughly, but I want to take this early opportunity to thank Mr. Hearst and the BOSTON AMERICAN for the great help given us in this campaign.

"I and the other Democrats throughout the State fully appreciate the help the BOSTON AMERICAN gave us in the fight, and when I have better opportunity I shall try to thank Mr. Hearst and his Boston editors more adequately for what they have done.

"The Democrats of Maine appreciate the fact that the BOSTON AMERICAN was an important factor in the decisive victory that has just been won. Last week's Maine editions of the BOSTON AMERICAN were thoroughly circulated throughout the State, and there is not a shadow of doubt that it contributed immensely towards the splendid result."

CURTISS MAKES TRIAL SPIN FOR FLIGHT TO LIGHT

HARVARD AVIATION FIELD, Sept. 13.—The finest weather for flying since the meet began assured the big crowd that gathered early this afternoon of a thrilling series of flights before the official close of the event at 6:30 this evening.

Glenn H. Curtiss will make several flights this afternoon and may attempt to beat Grahame-White's time around Boston Light. All of the stars of the aviation event will be in the air before night and it is expected that there will be a hot finish for the $50,000 in cash prizes.

GLENN H. CURTISS, WHO IS TO TRY THE LIGHT FLIGHT

CURTIS BEATS A MILE A MINUTE.

Curtiss made two short flights in his biplane to-day, in which, in the estimation of those who saw him, he broke all the speed records of the meet. The flights were only to try out his machine and he was not timed. It was agreed that he made more than a mile a minute.

At that rate of speed he could beat Grahame-White's wonderful record of last night, when the Englishman flew over the Boston Light course of thirty-three miles in a little more than thirty-four minutes.

Mr. Curtiss was asked after he had made two flights if he were ready to make the Boston Light attempt. He said that he could not tell at that time.

"I'll say this," said Mr. Curtis, "that I will not give up that $10,000 prize until I have made one supreme effort to get it. I am going to try another propeller on my biplane, the Boston, and I am also going to try my Hudson-Fulton flyer. I shall try to-day to get them both in the best possible shape and I shall not give up until 6:30 to-night."

"What speed would you need to develop to convince you that your machine could compete with the Bleriot."

"Well, it would have to be close to a mile a minute."

"You would want to make three laps in about six minutes, then?"

Bleriot Faster on Turns.

"I can't say that. The Bleriot is a faster machine than mine on the turns, because they warp their wings, while I use ailons; but in the straightaway I can compete better with him. I shall be guided by the wind conditions and the general tone of my machine. If there appears to be any chance of beating Mr. White's record I shall certainly make the attempt."

"What other events will you enter to-day?"

"I shall go on with the bomb-dropping and with the speed events, of course. There is no chance to beat the Wright brothers for accuracy, as they are mounted on skids, but if there is a strong head wind I may try for the getaway."

Mr. Curtiss admitted that Grahame-White had sprung a surprise on him with his monoplane. He said that if he had known what he would be forced to compete with in the Boston Light flight he could have fixed up a motor in his shop that would have developed more speed than anything he has on the ground.

Look for a Surprise.

The general impression gained from what Mr. Curtiss said and his manner of saying it was that he would spring a little surprise on the big event coming at the end of the official meet this evening in the Boston Light contest.

W. Starling Burgess made eight trials early to-day for duration. His longest flight was about 100 feet. This is enough to give him second prize as the records stand now. The second prize for amateurs is $250. He had a slight accident to his machine on the eighth trial.

Johnson's corrected time of distance made yesterday was announced to-day as 191 miles and 260 feet.

It's the early bird that gets the worm and of all the bird men who entered the

U. S. LEGATION SECRETARY AT PANAMA OUT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—H. O. Marsh of Illinois, secretary of the United States Legation at Panama, has been recalled according to an announcement made at the State Department to-day. He will be succeeded by Charles Campbell, Jr., of Missouri, Secretary of the United States Legation at Tokio, who is now in this country on a leave of absence.

Mr. Campbell will accompany Thomas C. Dawson, recently appointed minister to Panama, when the latter sails from New York Thursday for his post. The State Department refused to discuss the reasons for the recall of Secretary Marsh. Recently, Mr. Marsh, who has been acting charge d'affaires in Panama, was credited with an interview in a Panama newspaper declaring that the "United States would annex Panama if the election for vice-president was not conducted in a manner suitable to the wishes of the United States."

Marsh denied the interview under instructions from the State Department. Cable dispatches from Panama indicate that he is not popular with Panama officials. He is not to leave the diplomatic service, according to the State Department, but will be kept on duty here until another berth is found for him.

MRS. EDDY IS SUMMONED INTO COURT

A summons was issued to-day for Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, head of the Christian Science Church, to appear as a witness in the first session of the Municipal Criminal Court on September 29. The summons was placed in the hands of Special Officer John W. Murphy of the Back Bay police station and he was sent to Mrs. Eddy's Chestnut Hill residence to serve it.

Mrs. Eddy is wanted in court as a witness against Frederick E. King, employed in a garage at Tremont and Northampton streets, who is accused of stealing five automobile tires valued in all at $285. One of these tires belongs to Mrs. Eddy, and it is alleged that it was taken from an automobile belonging to her while the car was standing in front of the Christian Science Church.

King was arraigned before Judge Wentworth, who bound the summons for Mrs. Eddy in the first session of the Municipal Court to-day, and held in $300 for a hearing on September 29.

King is twenty-eight years old, and the police say he lives on Massachusetts avenue. They found, they say, the tire belonging to Mrs. Eddy in his possession.

Alfred Farlow when told of the summons having been issued for Mrs. Eddy said:

"I have been trying to get into communication with Mrs. Eddy's home to tell them of this summons, but have received no word from there as yet. It seems to me rather unreasonable to ask Mrs. Eddy to come to court in this small matter, as she would be of no assistance to the court. She does not know what her automobile tires look like, or whether the tires shown are hers or not. I feel sure that the court will take a reasonable view of the matter."

DALZELL'S FRIENDS FEAR HIS DEFEAT

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 13.—The announcement to-day of Dr. R. J. Black of McKeesport, who was recently defeated for the Republican congressional nomination by Representative John Dalzell, that he would run upon an independent ticket gave rise to fear in Republican circles that the district will go Democratic. The fight for the Republican nomination was bitterly contested and subsequently Dr. Black demanded a recount. The candidates in the field now are Congressman Dalzell, Republican; Wakefield, Democrat; and Black, Independent Republican.

DEMOCRATS CLAIM FOUR CONGRESSMEN

LATEST MAINE ELECTION FIGURES.

Plaisted	73,763
Fernald	64,394
Plaisted's plurality	9,369

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 13.—The returns in yesterday's election up to noon to-day when 491 towns and cities out of 521 had been heard from showed this victory for the Democrats:

Election of Frederick N. Plaisted by a plurality of 9,369.

The certain election of a Senator to succeed Hale.

The certain election of two Congressmen.

The election of seven out of nine sheriffs and other officials.

The latest figures on the gubernatorial result give Plaisted 73,763 and Governor Bert M. Fernald 64,394. The returns are coming in very slowly, and it is estimated that the vote of the remoter districts may reduce that of Mr. Palisted some, so that it has been figured that his plurality will be about 8,500.

TWO CONGRESSMEN SURE FOR DEMOCRATS.

The latest returns in the Congressional fight show:

First district, Asher C. Hinds, Republican, probably elected by about 200. This election will be contested.

Second district, Daniel J. McGillicuddy, Democrat, elected by 3,000.

Third district Samuel W. Gould, Democrat, elected by 2,200.

Fourth district, Frank E. Guernsey, Republican, elected by about 300.

With 141 senatorial and representative districts out of 182 heard from the Democrats have ninty in joint convention, only needing two more to insure a majority and thus elect a United States Senator to take the place of Senator Hale.

The new Legislature will also be able to redistrict the State, and that will certainly insure to the benefit of the party in power. Candidates for the Senate have already sprung up. Among them are Charles F. Johnson of Waterville, Lindley M. Staples of Washington, William M. Pennell of Brunswick, Oakley C. Curtis of Portland, John Clark Scates of Westbrook and James C. Hamlin of Portland.

The victors also captured the State Auditor. Twenty-one of the thirty-one Senators elected were Democrats, and a small majority in the House of Representatives insures the election of a Democratic executive council and a Democratic United States Senator to succeed Senator Hale.

From every district in the Pine Tree State came the reports of overwhelming Democratic gains. Small towns where heretofore a Democratic victory was considered beyond the remotest possibility have swelled the big list of Democratic representatives elect.

The result far exceeded the most sanguine expectations of the Democratic leaders and stuns the Republican managers. The Democrats have control of the state government.

Insurgency proved more widespread in the Republican ranks than was anticipated, although national issues were not mentioned on the stump.

There was no uncertainty in the voice with which Maine recorded her preference.

DEMOCRATS MAY WIN FOUR CONGRESSMEN

The Boston News Bureau printed a story this afternoon dated at Portland, which said:

"Returns show that there is still a good chance that the Democrats have captured all four congressional seats. With Harpswell unheard from, Hinds claims only 100 to 200 plurality in the First District; and as his opponent, Pownall, lives near Harpswell, he may poll enough there to win. In the Fourth District the impression is growing that Hanson, Democrat, has defeated Guernsey. Washington County returns are still incomplete, and final results will not be known for some hours; but in both the First and Fourth districts the vote is so close that recounts are probable.

HERRESHOF MAKES LOWEST GOLF SCORE

CLYDE PARK, Brookline, Sept. 13.—Robert A. Gardner of the Hinsdale Golf Club of Chicago, the present national amateur champion, put his title in danger in the national golf tournament at the Country Club to-day by turning in a total score of 160 for the two qualifying rounds. Gardner's score in the first round yesterday was 85. In the second qualifying round to-day he required 84 strokes for the 18 holes, giving a total of 169. As a score of 167 or better was probably necessary to qualify for match play, it was thought that Gardner might not survive the qualifying rounds.

The first forty players in the second qualifying round were led by Fred Herreshoff of New York, representing the Ekwanok C. C., who did the eighteen holes to-day in 74. This, with his 78 of the first round, gave him a total qualifying score of only 152, the best so far in the medal play.

Herreshoff's Card.

Warren K. Wood of the Homewood C. C., who turned in the lowest score yesterday, did the eighteen holes to-day in 79. This gave him a total qualifying score of 152, second to Herreshoff.

Herreshoff's card for to-day, the best of the first forty, was:

ELUDES DEER ISLAND GUARDS; ESCAPES IN BOAT

Taking advantage of a moment when the eyes of the guards were not upon him, Melvin Ingalls, an eighteen-year-old prisoner in the Reformatory at Deer Island, made a dash for liberty early today and gaining the beach unnoticed, escaped from the island in a rowboat.

His absence was not discovered until fifteen minutes later. The alarm was sounded. Guards seized their guns and ran hither and thither throughout the prison, marshalling the prisoners into line. A roll call was sounded in each of the various sections of the prison and it was not until every cell in the entire institution had been visited and inspected that the authorities were certain that Ingalls was the only one who had escaped.

Leaving a sufficient number of men to guard the other prisoners, all of whom were securely locked in their cells, the remaining guards, armed with rifles and revolvers, were rushed to the beach, where a conference was held.

Finally convinced that the fugitive did not have time to get very far away, the guards, after making a careful search of the beach, put off in motor boats and dories and searched the water in the vicinity of the island, but no trace of the escaped prisoner was found. In the meantime word had been sent to Police Headquarters and all the neighboring cities and towns were told of the escape and furnished with a description of the prisoner.

The harbor police were sent out to search for the fugitive and both the "Guardian" and the "Watchman" were pressed into service. The crew of one of the boats searched the north side and the other the south side of the harbor, without obtaining either a trace of Ingalls or the boat he had made his escape.

Ingalls was arrested by officers of the Hamilton Plain Station on a charge of breaking and entering, and following his arraignment in the Roxbury Court was found guilty and sentenced to a term of imprisonment at Deer Island, which he began on March 22.

RECORD SWORDFISH BROUGHT TO T WHARF

Swordfish records at T Wharf went to smash to-day, when the schooner Lafayette from the Jeffries fishing banks brought in the largest swordfish ever seen in Boston. Dressed, the fish weighed about 700 pounds, or about 150 pounds in excess of anything ever seen here before. The schooner Pargon, Captain George Peoples, from the Le Have Banks, sent for their fish, brought in thirty-one swordfish, each weighing over 150 pounds, which had been caught on the halibut trawls.

LOSS OF HAIR

Dandruff and Itching Scalp—Simple Way to Cure Them

The most common cause of loss of hair, dandruff and itching scalp is neglect. People don't wash the scalp and hair often enough. Leading authorities like Dr. J. C. Hayles and Dr. Woods Hutchinson, of New York, and Prof. Lassar, of Germany, recommend frequent washing with mild, neutral soaps. The best thing of all for this purpose is Bird's Head Wash, because it is made of a particularly fine soap, medicated with glycerin, white of eggs, cocoanut oil, salicylic acid. Bird's Head Wash makes a profuse lather, and not only cleans the hair and the outside of the scalp, but opens up and cleanses the pores as well. This opening of the pores is most beneficial and invigorating to the hair roots, and does more to prevent the loss of hair than all so-called "tonics" put together. A single shampoo with Bird's Head Wash will prove all these claims to your satisfaction. Tubes 25c, jars 50c, at all drug stores.

MOISSANT IN CHICAGO TO GOTHAM FLY

LONDON, Sept. 13.—John B. Moissant, the Chicago aviator, who holds the record of carrying a passenger across the English channel, and who accomplished a London to Paris flight after three weeks' of effort, informed the National News Association here to-day that he would sail for New York later this month to attempt to win the $25,000 prize which has been offered for a New York to Chicago flight.

Moissant will use an especially large Blériot machine, built upon special lines, and carrying several improvements founded upon inventions of the aviator.

"I am confident of success and I believe that I will have the most perfectly equipped machine ever started in America," said Moissant. "My machine has been built upon new lines and it is constructed for great speed as well as endurance. My own improvement will further its qualifications, I shall sail for New York at the end of the month."

The New York to Chicago air race will start on October 8 and will be carried on under the auspices of a New York and a Chicago newspaper.

ONE DEAD IN GREAT FIRE IN THE BRONX

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—One man is supposed to have perished and a number of volunteer fire fighters were injured early to-day when a $300,000 fire destroyed the Van Nest Woodworking Company in the Bronx and came near wiping out the Van Nest section of the borough. The Van Nest plant occupied a triangle in a hollow bounded by Adams street, Walker avenue and Van Nest avenue. This hollow was made a veritable caldron, the heat of which set fire to the Adams street houses. Twelve two-story buildings in Van Buren avenue were also destroyed through showers of sparks.

INDICT TEN PACKERS FOR CONSPIRACY

Ten high officials of the Swift, Armour and Morris beef concerns must answer to three indictments, each charging them with combination, conspiracy and illegal monopoly.

The Federal Grand Jury which has been investigating Chicago packers has indicted E. P. Swift, president of Swift & Co., Edward Swift, vice-president of Swift & Co.; Charles H. Swift, director of Swift & Co.; Francis A. Fowler, director of Swift & Co.; Edward Tilden, president of the National Packing Company; J. Ogden Armour, president of Armour & Co.; Arthur Meeker, general manager Armour & Co.; Thomas J. Connors, superintendent of Armour & Co.; Edward Morris, president of Morris & Co.; and Louis H. Heyman, manager of Morris & Co.

The first indictment in detail charges all defendants with engaging in a combination in restraint of interstate trade in fresh meats. The second charges conspiracy. The third charges the defendants with monopolizing the trade in fresh meats by unlawful means.

Allege Restraint of Trade.

The indictment charging the ten packing concerns officers with engaging in a combination in restraint of trade declares that the object of the agreement is the elimination of competition between the Swift, the Armour and the Morris groups of defendants in the purchase of live cattle, sheep and hogs, and also in the sale of fresh meats throughout the United States.

The indictment further declares that the method adopted for so doing was to refrain from bidding up the prices of live stock and then to agree on a uniform system of figuring the cost of meats sent to the branch houses. This resulted in the "fixing of an excessive price on the meat."

In the next step, says the indictment, was to force managers of branch houses to obtain this price. If any margin less than the price was permitted it was now agreed on by all of the defendants.

Next, it is charged, the National Packing Company was used to obtain information being sent to the Chicago offices of the National Company at the end of each week. There it was accessible to the defendants as directors of the companies. These reports, it is charged, were used by all the concerns as the basis of orders for the next week's business.

Charge Monopoly.

The indictment also charges that the Swift, Armour and the Morris interests held stock in the National Packing Company in proportions equal to the rate of business done by the three houses.

The third indictment charges that the packers have monopolized the trade by a combination eliminating competition in the purchase of cattle and in the sales of meats, by conducting the business of the National Packing Company itself in harmony with the business of the Swift, Armour and Morris interests and by removing the New York Butchers and Provision Meat Association from the field of competition by purchasing stock in that concern, from time to time, until control of it was obtained.

BOSTON HAS BANNER "20TH CENTURY" CAR

The Boston car of the Twentieth Century limited to Chicago was the banner car of the entire train during the post season, according to the New York Central and Boston & Albany officials. The coach that carries Boston and New England people West on fast time did the best business of any and easily won the title of star coach in the Twentieth Century Limited.

Charles E. Colony, city passenger agent of the Boston & Albany, declared the business done had proven the value of the Boston car, and showed that in time meetings of New England will be pushed in demanding for New England an entire through train from this city to Chicago.

Got Former Sultan's $40,000,000 by Diplomacy.

LONDON—A telegram from Saloniki throws new light on the recent purchase by Turkey of two antiquated German battleships for $45,000,000. It will be remembered that the Ottoman Government recently failed to recover the balance of ex-Sultan Abdul Hamid's fortune, which was lying in German banks. German diplomacy proved more amenable than German law, and the Government accepted for the battleships $40,000,000 of Abdul Hamid's money, which was practically in German possession, calling on the Ottoman exchequer only for the balance. The transaction is highly pleasing to both parties. Turkey has been able to make use of the deposed Sultan's money, while Germany has been able to sell two obsolete warships and to obtain prompt payment for them.

Alfonso Yields to Cabinet.

SAN SEBASTIAN—Headstrong as he is, King Alfonso has had to bow to the will of the Cabinet, of Senor Canalejas, which practically forbade his attendance at the yacht races at Bilbao on Saturday. The King had determined to go to the regatta, which was postponed at his request, but his ministers advised so strongly against the plan that, despite the fact that his bodyguard already had gone to the city, where the mining strike recently caused a critical situation, the monarch was compelled to accede to Senor Canelejas's wishes.

Accused of $35,000 Swindle.

BERLIN—A Mexican who gave the name of Jose Piroli de Charduy and an American of German descent who gave the name of Emil Becker and said he was from Chicago have succeeded in swindling a Munich jeweller of gems worth $35,000. The jeweller met the swindlers in society and allowed them to have jewels on hearing from the painter Friedrich A. Kaulbach, to whom he telephoned, that the Mexican had ordered a portrait from him.

Victim of "Hobble Skirt."

PARIS—The "hobble skirt" has found another victim. At the Chantilly race course a horse that was being led through the paddock bolted through a crowd of spectators. One person who was knocked down owing to the tightness of her skirt fell immediately under the horse. Its shoe caught in her hair and she was dragged a considerable distance. Her skull was fractured.

Sold Pope's Golden Locks.

ROME—It was noticed some time ago that Anthony Graziadei, one of the Pope's personal attendants, was spending far more money than his wages as a servant justified. He was carefully watched. It was learned that whenever the Pope had his hair cut Graziadei gathered the shorn locks and sold them as souvenirs, thus making several thousand lire annually.

Opium Congress Postponed.

PEKIN—The meeting of the international opium conference at The Hague, which was suggested by the United States, has again been postponed, at the request of China. It is now set for this time next year. The conference is to draw up an international agreement for the suppression of the traffic in the drug within a given period.

Charters Zeppelin Airship.

MARRIAGE ON LINER TURNS OUT A JOKE

Passengers on the liner Numidian had the experience of attending a wedding reception far out at sea. Two of their number were married Saturday evening in the liner's cabin. It was only a mock marriage, but most of those who wished joy to "bride and groom" didn't know that until afterward. Miss E. Riddell, an attractive young woman who was returning to her home in Hartford, and Joseph Andrews of Exeter, were the "contracting parties." Mrs. Mabel McNicol of Providence, who left even a Justice of the Peace, officiated.

FISH INDUSTRY TO BE DISCUSSED

The fish industry of Boston will be the topic of discussion at the first meeting of the Boston Chamber of Commerce Assembly after the Summer vacations, which takes place at the American House on Wednesday, September 21, at 12:30 p. m. These meetings are open to all members of the Chamber, but the delegates elected by the different trades are expected to attend. In view of the decision of the Hague Tribunal on the Newfoundland fisheries dispute, announced last week, such a discussion will be timely.

BLIND WOMAN BADLY BURNED

While trying to light a fire early today, Mrs. Hattie F. Cheever, widow of Appleton F. Cheever of No. 70 Harvard avenue, Hyde Park, who has been blind for ten years, was badly burned.

The sightless woman was starting a fire in the kitchen stove as was her usual custom. She went too close to the range and in a few moments sparks from the newly made fire ignited her loose wrapper. Her screams attracted the attention of Mrs. W. F. Crawford, a tenant in the house, and with the aid of a passing expressman went to the assistance of the woman.

Mrs. Cheever was removed to the Dr. Bennett Hospital, where it is said that her recovery is doubtful.

BOSTON GIRL TO WED TITLE

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Miss Edith Ely of Boston, known on the grand opera stage as Edith De Lys, is to be married on Thursday to the Vicomte Fritz Von Michaelis, a wealthy Frenchman.

Miss De Lys, who is now a member of the Covent Garden Theatre, was a heroine last January of a somewhat exciting incident at the Verdi Theatre, Florence. The singer cast for the soprano part in Puccini's "La Boheme" was taken ill and Miss De Lys was engaged to take the part.

The Italians felt their nation insulted and organized a cabal to drive her from the stage. She, however, triumphed, and among the first to congratulate her was the Vicomte Von Michaelis.

FITZGERALD TO GIVE A DINNER FOR AVIATORS

To recognize officially the daring feats of aerial navigation performed by the aviators who are present at the Boston-Harvard aero meet in Squantum, Mayor Fitzgerald will entertain them at dinner Thursday evening. The details for the dinner are being arranged by Secretary Leahy of the Mayor's office and Charles J. Glidden, chairman of the Contest Committee. All the aviators will be present.

Mayor Fitzgerald was informed over the long distance telephone to Montreal, where he has been for the past two days, that the City Council yesterday refused to pass his order appropriating, by transfer from the reserve fun, $100 to be expended in the purchase of a cup to be offered as a prize at the aero meet for bomb throwing. He said he merely desired to bring the matter to the official attention of the Council and that it was his intention to donate the money for the cup from the contingency fund of his office.

PATROLMAN GAFFNEY TAKES A BRIDE

In was learned in Chelsea to-day that Patrick Gaffney, the most popular patrolman in the city, who is at present on the liquor squad, was married yesterday to Miss Mildred Harlow of Rochester. Gaffney is about thirty-five. Miss Barlow has been employed as a waitress at Hollidge's store during the last few months. Gaffney's vacation starts to-day and the couple left at once for Miss Barlow's former home in Canada. On their return they will live in Chelsea.

BEGINS 44TH SEA VOYAGE AT 72

George Foster, aged seventy-two years, for many years a resident of Malden, sails to-day from East Boston for Liverpool for the forty-fourth time. Mr. Foster spends his Winters in Denmark and his Summers in Malden. When a boy of fourteen years Mr. Foster began a career on the sea. He formerly conducted a small grocery in Malden.

FORAKER CONFIDENT.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Former Senator Foraker of Ohio, who is here after spending the Summer in Maine, to-day said he regarded the Ohio political situation as decidedly promising of success for the Republicans. Regarding the general political situation, he said: "I fancy it is somewhat premature to offer opinions as to how things those days, and I confess it is so with me."

MME. CAVALIERI TIES UP THE CHANLER BANK ACCOUNT PENDING HUSBAND'S SETTLEMENT

Prima Donna's Step Means a Determined Fight in Court for Money.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the grand opera singer, has tied up the bank accounts of her millionaire husband, Robert Winthrop Chanler. It was reported this afternoon. This was the first decisive step to be taken by the prima donna since Chanler left her in Paris, and it means that she will fight in the courts here to enforce the ante-nuptial contract signed by him before their marriage, in which he turned practically all of his wealth over to her.

From the chaotic state of affairs of Chanler and his bride, the AMERICAN learned positively to-day that under the instrument creating the trust fund involving the young millionaire's inheritance through his father and mother, his estate is so held that not even the income is assignable. Therefore, prominent lawyers expressed the opinion yesterday that the agreement which Chanler signed for his bride's benefit is not worth the paper it is written on.

At the same time, Chanler's friends were free in saying that the ex-Sheriff of Dutchess County was laughing up his sleeve when he was assigning his income to the grand opera singer.

Not only is there an alimony claim of $20,000 a year by his first wife against his income, but it was said to-day after sessions of attorneys, including Sidney Harris, Edward L. Peraino and Frederick Wattriss, together with Chanler, that much of the original property is so heavily involved with mortgages that it will be a long time before Mme. Cavalieri could get possession of a cent, should she go to law about the matter and win her suit.

Income Not Assignable.

Great care was taken by the father of "Big Bob" to see that the Astor estate did not pass out of the family's hands, and, likewise, on his mother's part, the same care was taken with the Delano funds. Under the instrument creating the trust fund, "Bob's" inheritance is held for "management, investment and reinvestment," the income to be paid equally to Robert and his brothers and sisters, and that the income is not assignable. It is what is called an "express trust," with no stipulation that it may be swiped at anybody's will and with no stipulation that the income may be assigned.

This is the law relative to a real property trust (Sec. 103, Real Property Law):

"The right of a beneficiary of an express trust to receive the rents and profits of real property and apply them to the use of any person cannot be transferred by assignment or otherwise."

It is the same with personal property, according to Section 15 of the Personal Property law:

"The right of a beneficiary to enforce the performance of a trust to receive the income of personal property and to apply it to the use of any person cannot be transferred by assignment or otherwise."

These statutes, it was declared by the lawyer informant of the AMERICAN, "have been construed by the Court of Appeals and the Appellate Division to the effect that the right of a beneficiary of a trust fund, whereby he receives profits from invested personalty or real estate, is not assignable under the trust delcenture so specifically provided."

Effect of the Debts.

There was considered by the several lawyers in the Chanler affair the matter of the effect of debts and other obligations upon the ante-nuptial agreement whose Cavalieri holds. As to this, legal opinion was:

"Only when there exists a surplus of income from a trust fund beyond that necessary to support the beneficiary and his family, can a creditor take any part of the trust fund; and the duty is on the creditor to prove that the income is in excess of the needs of the beneficiary."

The developments in the case are many. There was a sort of semi-conference between Mr. Chanler and his lawyers, including Frederick Wattriss, the latter representing Mr. Chanler's first wife, Julia Chanler. Mr. Perkins is confidential adviser of Mr. Chanler, and he came to New York for the purpose of getting the exact status of the situation. He first conferred with Mr. Harris, later with Mr. Wattriss, and lastly held into conference with Mr. Chanler.

Mr. Perkins admitted the ante-nuptial agreement between Mr. Chanler and Cavalieri, and also admitted that the conference to be held was solely for the purpose of finding out just where Mr. Chanler's estate and income stood.

"This must first be gone over carefully," said Mr. Perkins, "before even lawyers know how strong the agreement is, but no one on express trust any legal man knows that the beneficiary cannot assign a cent. of course, no restrictions can be placed on what he does with the money after it comes into his hands. But so far as legally assigning the property or income—that is impossible.

"Mr. Chanler is exceedingly nervous at the present time and no one knows what his ideas are. But it will surely take several days before we can get the true status of the estate."

Papers Carefully Inspected.

From Mr. Wattriss's office, Mr. Perkins and Mr. Wattriss went to the home of William Astor Chanler, No. 33 West Sixty-seventh street, where the ex-Sheriff of Dutchess County is keeping in strict seclusion. Later on Mr. Harris joined the party, and for several hours the lawyers and Mr. Chanler went carefully over all his papers. It was said by one of the lawyers that there are trust funds within trust funds, and restrictions on certain pieces of property and stocks and bonds, that are so complicated that Mr. Chanler himself has never even tried to figure them out.

One important point in the investigation was that relative to the $20,000 a year which Chanler pays his first wife. When the conference started none of the lawyers knew whether this agreement was written or whether it was simply being paid by Mr. Chanler as he received his income. One of the legal men admitted that if it was simply a word of mouth agreement made by Chanler to his first wife, and if Cavalieri should be found to have claims on his income, his first wife might be deprived of her share.

Frederick Martin, who represents Mrs. Chanler No. 1, admitted that he had received a cablegram from her echo also Paris in Paris requesting him to look out for her rights.

She Assumes Responsibilities.

It was learned that the ante-nuptial agreement made between Chanler and the diva is a very brief affair, and simply promises to give to her a "marriage settlement" consisting of a greater part of the young man's income. But she, in return, is held under agreement to fulfil certain responsibilities. Chief among these is that she is to pay the interest on certain Manhattan property owned by Chanler, and also from time to time liquidate the mortgages themselves.

It was first thought by Chanler's attorneys that this latter clause would be enough to void the agreement, but this became insignificant in face of the discovery of the "express trust."

Sidney Harris of No. 6 Wall street, acting as representative of Mr. Chanler in Paris, spoke for publication for the first time. He said:

"There was an ante-nuptial agreement. My client requests that I withhold at present its details. I cannot tell you how much money is involved, nor whether it involved property, or the income from property. That may come out later."

"Warren Delano, Jr. was suggested, "say," as one of the trustees, that Chanler has some property not held in trust, which he is free to dispose of."

Mr. Harris replied: "About Mr. Chanler's property I am not influenced. Other than having that in charge—the Union Trust Company, the New York Insurance and Trust Company, and then there is the trust administered by the Chanlers."

"Will there be a family conference."

"No. Yet I expect to see some of the family to-morrow."

Still Loves Cavalieri.

"Which is true—that Mr. Chanler is seeking to annul the ante-nuptial agreement, or that he is trying to get the trustees to make good on it?" he was asked.

"I will not answer that question. Doubtless the trustees could enlighten you. Mr. Chanler still loves Cavalieri—that is, the things he loves her.

"Has there been a disagreement between them?"

"Well, I will say that, aside from this financial difference—yes! It was a financial difference—they are on good terms. I don't know how long Mr. Chanler will stay here nor whether his wife will come here. He has a bad state of nerves and is in seclusion for a few days.

"I may assure you that he did send this cable dispatch to her, and it was in response to the one received from her by him Saturday:

"Have seen no one. It is not true. Work begins. Devotedly, Robert.' He sent it without consulting counsel."

Enter the Big Brother.

While all the excitement was running rife in the Chanler camp, Oreste Cavalieri, brother of Mme. Cavalieri-Chanler, arrived unexpectedly in New York from Europe, and at once rushed to the defense of his sister. He declared that his sister had never seen a penny of Chanler's money, and that the agreement between the scion of the house of Astor and his sister was no more than a marriage settlement.

He declared that as soon as his sister's strength returned she would return to New York and join her husband. He seemed a bit worried, however, over the fact that Chanler has made no statement in reply to the stories and rumors that have been flying about. He said he had made every effort to see Chanler, but the latter had kept out of his way.

When seen at the Savoy Hotel Cavalieri said that the reports, so far as he knew, are absolutely untrue and did an injustice to both his sister and her husband.

"I left my sister at Cahuzac less than ten days ago. She seemed in the happiest of moods and talked delightfully of Mr. Chanler, whom she has a great regard for. When I reached New York and saw the sensational stories I was surprised beyond expression. There is no truth in any of it. I have tried to see Mr. Chanler and have him deny these stories, but as I am unable to locate him up to date, I feel it incumbent upon myself to see that they are corrected.

"I know that before his marriage Mr. Chanler wished to make some provision for my sister, naturally, and made the usual marriage settlement.

"Mr. Chanler's return to this country was fully approved by my sister, who was to leave Cahuzac to accompany him. When my sister is able to travel she will join him here."

"HE LOVES ME—HE LOVES ME NOT."

GLENN H. CURTISS IS OUT TO-DAY TO BEAT GRAHAME-WHITE'S FLIGHT TO BOSTON LIGHT

AMERICAN AVIATOR HOPES TO TAKE HONORS FROM ENGLISHMAN AT AERIAL MEET.

shoo-days' meet of the Harvard Aeronautical Society, Grahame-White, the first man to get out and run up points, is the man who gets the lion's share of the prize money.

But while in the majority of the events the prizes are now so adjusted that there are two or three events in which the scores may change to-day and a shift be made in the awards as they now stand. But aside from the bomb-dropping contest little money will pass from one man's credit to another.

Judging from the present standing of the aviators and their past performances, there is every reason to believe that even the melon is cut to-night and the crisp checks for prize money handed out. Grahame-White will receive $17,100, Johnstone $5,500, Brookins, $4,250, Curtiss, $2,050 and Willard $1,000.

Wright Against White.

These figures do not include the $5,000 for the bomb dropping contest, which will be fought out to-day by Wilbur Wright dropping the plaster of paris shells from the Brookins machine and Grahame-White using his Farman.

Since in the trials made time for Wright has the better average he is looked upon by many as the probable winner.

In to-day's events it is doubtful if much time is spent in trying to make record runs. To be sure of this third money in the altitude contest Johnstone will have to make a climb, and it is probable that Grahame-White and several others may try to upset the money ratings in the accuracy contest by trying to better the mark of the first four inches set by Johnstone.

But for the most part the fight will centre over the bomb dropping prize of $5,000. In this event the Englishman has made a score of 75 with 25 bombs, Brookins leads with a score of 87, but he has used 28 bombs. Grahame-White has 92 bombs left and Brookins 93.

It would seem that the bomb dropping contest rests between these men, but Curtiss or Willard are liable to put in some time on the event and have as good a show as for the $2,500 in the $2,500.

There is still $500 to be picked up by anyone who will go up an hour and make the best record in that time. Curtiss has the best record on three laps, they being by the time of 1 minute 13 minutes and 35 seconds, they will get $1,000 and Brookins will take the $500.

It would seem that Johnstone is the man to take the $500 or the $1,000, but he may be. It doesn't much matter, for Wilbur Wright will get the check.

White in the Lead.

While the contests will continue nearly to-day and some changes may be made, the fact remains that Grahame White stands foremost among the aviators who have competed in the long log meeting of the Harvard Aeronautical Society.

He has been the life of the meet in many ways and had it not been for his nerve work during the first few days of the affair it might not have been the wonderful success which it promises to be.

It must be remembered that in being awarded almost as much money as all the American fliers combined the loss for not competing for any of the $5,000 prizes and one thousand dollars each for the machines and engines of Europe can compete and compete successfully against anything which has been produced in this country.

Grahame-White has been forced to work every minute of the few short hours given up to the competition each day for prizes amounting, and he has shown his pluck, grit and daring, endurance and judgment in the prize money which he carried out his efforts.

Mile a Minute to Light.

At no time during the meet has he been found wanting, and although his first flight to the light brought a record against which few if any of the aviators drivers cared to compete, he went out yesterday and put the prize beyond their reach by doubling the mile and a half in a minute clip.

In fact, if the course which he followed were carefully measured, it is highly probable that he covered over thirty four miles of flying course and that he did much of the distance at a rate of several miles an hour.

Out of the ten events he has made the best single performance in four. He has had no engine trouble and has shown a smash-up, which was repaired in a little over twelve hours, at the hands of a treacherous gust of wind.

At the same time the American aviators have shown a courage and consistency in flying down his line which is highly creditable for which they should be given no small praise.

Easy Win for Briton.

But they have been able to divide the events and allow the men with the best qualified machines to compete in those events for which they seem to be especially qualified.

They have overhauled Grahame-White in the altitude, distance and duration contests, have made a showing in the accuracy trials and with a better average in bomb dropping are located upon as the only winner in the bomb dropping contest.

The one disappointment to the followers of the meet has been the inability of the American machines to compete with the Herial in the flights to the light.

It was thought by many that flights would be held every day and that some days fewer would be held in which two or more machines started for the light from the field would give a spectacular contest among the clouds.

But this has not materialized and the only contest which has probably be won without a struggle by Grahame-White, who used up a good deal of fuel minutes and sec and four-fifths seconds of his valuable time to do so.

In this event it is doubtful if it was necessary for him to make two trips, but as it stands he has nothing about a half minute for his time. Remembering that this young man was paid a handsome sum by the management to come to this country and compete this is not poor pay.

But then it is understood that Glenn Curtiss received $10,000 as a bonus for coming to the meet and it cannot be said that he has worked as hard as some men who do gathering this amount with the $2,500 which he is now in the air to prove.

Considering expense of competing, Wilbur Wright will probably come out of the meet a heavy loser, but he has made a big hit in the neighborhood in showing the people how to fly and how to be careful in so doing, in doing so in safe manner.

If they can bomb dropping and Johnstone goes up for the slow lap trial to-day Wilbur Wright quits with a cool $15,250 in prize money.

There is no chance that entering over each registers out in Dayton at $4 a day, as the father of the aeroplane is said to have done before he became convinced that he and brother Orville could fly.

Willard a Yankee Star.

Some of the best work of the meet was done yesterday afternoon before a crowd which was as enthusiastic as any which has viewed the birdmen. The features were equally the work of Johnstone and Grahame-White, the long expected attempt on the part of Curtiss-Willard to break the light failing to materialize.

Somehow or other it cannot be said that Mr. Curtiss has done a whole lot during his stay on the Harvard aviation field to show himself as the rightful owner of the title of "King of America" as yet, unless—

There is little to be gained at this stage of the sport in belittling the efforts of any man, but it is far as the meet is now going Hector Willard, the young man who is the employe of Curtiss, has shown more ability in displaying the machines of the Curtiss machine than its inventor.

Johnstone Holds Record.

Mr. Willard has worked hard and consistently since the meet started. He has not been above extending courtesies to members of the press and to others who were concerned with the desire to try rid ing in the air. He has entered the long conditions with spirit and from start to finish has won the admiration and applause of the patrons of the sport.

Moreover, had he not accidented the meet is doubtful if the Curtiss biplane would have the large number of admirers in and around Boston that it now has.

But that is not talking about yesterday's good work on the part of Johnstone and Brookins and the Englishman, Grahame-White again scoring in distance and duration, but he could not better the record of Johnstone, who kept the Wilbur Wright machine sailing around and around the field for a record sustained mileage of 4,000 feet, using up three hours, five minutes and forty seconds in the air.

And then to show that he knows some thing about aeroplanes and how to handle he came to earth in the hottest all-going machine of the entire meet, and by the inches of the centre, a world's record for accuracy.

Great Flight to Light.

The fact that he stayed in the air longer than two hours, three minutes and thirty seconds gives him the new American record for duration. The record was held by Clifford B. Harmon. Whose long flight now stands as the American

White sped around the course three times and made the circle of the field to travel and turn turned his little Herlot and Curtiss machine and went down to Brookline and back, after the same manner, time of thirty-four minutes and three and fifth seconds.

But he will not have a chance to do to-day, for it is announced that he is confined that he could make faster time. To-day he has a slight chance of winning out in the altitude contest providing he does not run up against Brookins in the event.

Brookins will have to speed some time in the bomb dropping contest, for it takes a long time to drop fifty-two bombs unless two are dropped at once, as was the case pursued by Wilbur Wright yesterday in making use of his foe Brookins.

Beaten Alive to Sport.

But Grahame-White has got sixty-two shots to fire and he will be busy for some time. Johnstone has the duration money cinched and may be sent up for altitude and, given plenty of time, should get a mark which it would take the Englishman long to reach.

For contests only last from 2 o'clock until 6:30 o'clock, although the contest committee may open them an hour earlier to-day.

Boston has not been quick in awakening to the sport in which can be had in watching the competitions for the big list of prizes at the Harvard aviation field.

But now that the people have come to a realization that the American aviators have had a hard fight on their hands to prevent the Englishman from sailing back home with the money, and that the Herial comes to his waiter, they have crowded the grounds every day. To-day will undoubtedly be one of the biggest days of the meet.

Many hard fights will be brought to a close this sunset but it will not end Boston's chance to see the birdmen in action. The meet will run for two days more and on these two days the fliers will give some of their most spectacular performances.

Some Other Events.

The program will include attempts to break world's records for altitude, speed, distance, accuracy, etc., for prizes of $1,000 each are offered for any world's record broken during these two days. The special cup and trophy prizes, such as the Harvard Aeronautical Society Cup, the Commodore Barry Trophy offered by John Barry Ryan, the City of Boston Cup and the John Hayes Hammond Cup, may still be competed for in the bomb dropping contests.

Brookins and Johnstone will give during these two extra days some of their startling exhibitions, such as short turns, high dives, slips and cutting small circles, which they have been using.

Grahame-White promises to develop even higher speed and his Herlot flies at a terrific speed when he is in the air. Curtiss is planning on his Herlot and Wilbur and Orville Wright are keeping the interesting possibility in a pleasant mix between Glenn Curtiss and his new 50-horse power engine and Grahame-White in his Herlot.

Charles F. Willard will, no doubt, be among the aviators to-day if the world's passengers carrying record and take six people up in his machine.

EVENTS THAT MAY TAKE PLACE DURING COMING TWO DAYS

Grahame-White, Brookins, Johnstone and Glenn Curtiss will record Wednesday to an extent the Harvard meet and drop three bombs each on a target 3 feet wide and 200 feet long, placed on the field in the form of a bow and arrow. The aviator dropping the three bombs nearest the centre of the cross will be declared the winner. Boston cup from Mayor Fitzgerald and the second best bomb dropper will receive the Barry Ryan Hammond.

Grahame-White, either Wednesday or Thursday will try to lower his speed record over the course in his speedy Herlot monoplane. It will use his Farman by another to carry passengers both Wednesday and Thursday.

The Wright aviators, Brookins and Johnstone, will demonstrate their "Dutch" rolls and their short turns with biplanes, tilted at an angle of 45 degrees. Brookins will also attempt to break the world's record for altitude.

Pursuit and neck-and-neck races between the Wright machines will take place either Wednesday or Thursday.

Glenn Curtiss, it is also reported upon good authority, will make speedy flights around the course in his new hydro-aeroplane with the aid of three which he flew from Albany to New York.

Charles F. Willard may contest with Curtiss in speed and duration events and Arch Hoxsey and J. C. Eckel on a number of trips. The latter will do some target shooting. Willard will also carry as a passenger a man 92 years old. The old gentleman's name has not yet been disclosed by the contest committee.

A. V. Roe, the English aviator, will attempt to fly his triplane to-morrow or Thursday.

BOSTON FIGHT UPON FREIGHT RATES IS ON

Industrial questions of tremendous importance to Boston and New England must be settled during the Fall and Winter, and the Boston Chamber of Commerce is beginning its second active year with a determination to have them settled right.

The great fight to prevent the railroads increasing their freight rates is already on and Boston has been largely represented at the hearings in New York before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Louis D. Brandeis, a member of the Boston Chamber, is counsel for all the East coast commercial bodies which are opposing the advance, and D. O. Ires, manager of the transportation department of the Chamber, is watching the New England interests.

Many thousands of dollars will be lost to New England business men if the railroad men get what they want, for the effective organization of merchants and business men stand in the way.

New Industries for Boston.

The industrial situation in Boston and New England has been studied by a committee of the Chamber for several months, and recommendations will be made very shortly which it is hoped will result in bringing to Boston new industries and stimulating Boston capital to invest in home industries.

The passage of the Weeks bill for the preservation of the White Mountain forests can only be accomplished by a hard fight, and it is likely that the attempt will be made to have the new bill is forced through the United States Senate, where it was popular after passing the House at the last session.

The cutting of timber upon the slopes of the White Mountains will soon not only destroy the beauty of these hills, but endanger the water supply of New England. It is of great importance that private interests be protected from further devastation on the mountains.

For the first time, similar bills have been killed at each session of Congress, and the Forestry Committee of the Chamber of Commerce is bending every effort to prevent the Weeks bill meeting a similar fate.

New Demurrage Rule.

The New England railroads have announced that the new forty-eight-hour demurrage rules, which will put delay in unloading freight upon the consignees, will go into effect in a few days. This means great loss to New England merchants, who believe that this extension should be borne by the railroads, as in the past. The Boston Chamber of Commerce has petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission for an investigation and for the suspension of the present rules until regulations can be made by the commission.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has been asked to investigate the rates and regulations of express companies which are believed to be excessive. In addition to the Boston Chamber's 125 other commercial bodies have petitioned the Interstate Commission for an investigation.

During the Winter the Joint Board of Metropolitan Improvements drew and presented to the legislature a report as to the advisability of the North Shore and South Station tunnel, the most desirable route, the approximate cost and how the work should be carried out by the city. This is a matter of the greatest importance to Boston and will be closely watched by the committee on Metropolitan Improvements and Transportation.

Special Committee Report.

The report of the special committee which visited Texas with the hope of obtaining the Democratic National Convention for Boston and a Texas port will be made within a short time. The report will be made public and in Texas and New England is anxious to get the full text of it.

Other grave questions to be considered during the Winter are the development of East Boston, the character of the great industrial exposition to be held in October, 1911, the workmen's compensation law, factory laws and inspection, etc.

Three important public utilities questions demand settlement, the West End, Boston Elevated consolidation, the Boston Elevated bonding bill, and the granting of a certificate to the Boston & Eastern Electric Railway Company.

In October a delegation from the Houston, Tex., Real Estate Exchange will visit Boston and in June the Chicago Association of Commerce will return the visit of the Boston Chamber.

FREIGHT PROTEST MEETING POSTPONED

At the request of D. O. Ires, manager of the transportation department of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the meeting to discuss the proposed increase in railroad freight rates, which was to have been held in the rooms of the New England Shoe & Leather Association to-morrow afternoon, has been postponed. Mr. Ires asked the secretary of the association from New York to postpone the meeting, as the rate case have dragged to such unexpected lengths and are developing features so vital to New England shippers, including shoe manufacturers, that we do not wish to be misrepresented in any way and it is deemed important to their interests to remain here.

MORE THAN 200,000 CHILDREN TO START SCHOOL TOMORROW

The public schools of Boston open tomorrow morning. It is expected that 103,000 high and grammar school pupils will pour into the city's schools at the opening hour. This is 2,000 more than attended the schools last year.

Already the schools of the towns in the suburbs have opened their doors, most of them yesterday and today. Their total enrollment easily figures more than 100,000, so that in Greater Boston to-morrow more than 200,000 school children will have started their year's tasks.

At the School Committee's offices in Mason street to-day this work was directed forth to the anxious parents of the city:

"There will be a seat for every child."

The School Committee, Superintendent Brooks and his assistants and the School-house Commissioners have worked night and day to bring this about. In many schools the rooms are far from satisfactory, it is admitted, but in a few weeks more new schoolhouses will be ready and there will be more room than ever by the time the snow flies.

The officials are not very proud of some of the old, wornout school buildings still in use, but as fast as the money becomes available new buildings will take their places.

There have been 14,472 young people who have applied for admission to the fifteen high schools of the city this year.

Taking Care of Surplus.

The Girls' High School was the largest last year, with the Dorchester High School second. Thus far indications are that those schools will forge farther ahead. Each high school is expected to show a healthy gain, and where the increase can not be accommodated, the surplus will be transferred to other high schools.

About 80,000 applicants for admission to the elementary schools are expected. Increases will probably be located in the Adams, Blackington and Lyman districts, East Boston; the Franklin district, South End; the Phillips Brooks school, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Roger Wolcott and Edward Everett districts, Dorchester, and the Lowell district in West Roxbury.

The grammar schools which open to-morrow is fifteen high schools, one trade school, sixty-seven grammar schools, two hundred and twenty-five primary schools, one hundred and one kindergartens.

Entrance examinations for the Latin and high schools will be held as follows: For Latin schools, Wednesday, September 14, 9 a. m., Boys at the Warren Avenue Latin School. Girls at the Girls' Latin School on Huntington, near Longwood avenue.

High schools, Wednesday and Thursday at 9 a. m. at the Normal School on Huntington, near Longwood avenue.

Dorchester Annex Ready.

The Dorchester High Annex will be ready Wednesday. There are eighteen class rooms, a wood-working room, metal handicraft and mechanical drawing room, with lockers in the basement.

Eight rooms in the Franklin Union building, Berkeley street, and four rooms in the Tremont building, Kenwood street, and Huntington avenue, will be occupied for overflow classes of the South End Girls' High School.

Six additional rooms in the building at the corner of Tremont and Montgomery streets will be occupied. The High School of Practical Arts, for additional boys' work in the Mechanics building, for overflow pupils.

Roxbury High School—Five rooms in the Eliot Congregational building, Hutchins street, Roxbury, will be occupied about October 1.

Elementary Schools, Lewis district, Roxbury—The new building on Hutchins street will be ready and it is hoped it has been named the William Lloyd Garrison School.

Warren district, Charlestown—Additional accommodations have been secured by the purchase of the Doane House in Pearl street.

In the Wendell Phillips district, a new building has been completed and will be ready for occupancy when school opens.

Portable school houses have been moved to the districts where the greatest pressure is anticipated.

NERVOUS DYSPEPSIA

A Disorder Which Yields to the Tonic Treatment as This Philadelphia Case Shows.

There is a form of indigestion in which the stomach may be in a perfectly sound condition. This is called nervous dyspepsia and arises from a disturbance of the nervous system which controls the digestive process. That the nerves do control this process is evident from the fact that acute emotions such as grief or anger immediately stop digestion, and that an injury to the brain or a nerve center causes nausea and other disturbances of the stomach. The digestive fluids such as saliva and gastric juice are the products of cells which are abundantly supplied with nerve fibres, and the mere expectation of food will start the flow of these fluids.

An instance in which this form of nervous trouble was readily cured by the tonic treatment was that of Mr. Joseph Waldon, of 818 North Eighth street, Philadelphia, Pa. He says:

"I think my nervousness was due to railroad work with its long hours and irregular meals. I was sick for four or five years and at one time was confined to bed. I had no desire for food and was greatly distressed by what I ate. I had heartburn, gas formed on my stomach and often I had to vomit. I got out of breath and would have palpitation of the heart if I exerted myself. My head ached a great deal and some days would be so bad that I would have to quit work and come home. I had no strength or ambition, was pale and very nervous. I was restless and could not sleep well for I would suddenly wake up through the night with a startled feeling.

"The doctor said I had nervousness but his prescriptions did not help me. Some of my friends advised me to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I did and got better in a short time. I took quite a few boxes in all and was completely cured."

A new edition of the booklet, "What to Eat and How to Eat," is free on request. Send a postal for it today and begin to cure yourself by following the directions it contains.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by addressing Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

VANDERBILT COURSE OPEN FOR PRACTICE

By J. C. KERRIGON.

All racing roads will soon lead toward Long Island, as within the next ten days the course for the Vanderbilt cup race will be open for practice by the contestants. As now arranged, the racing pilots will be given a chance to try out their speed monsters every morning from 5 to 8 a. m., beginning on September 20, until October 1, the day of the race.

Manager Durlington says he expects at least twenty-five cars will start. Probably the first team to reach the course will be the Marmon racing crew, consisting of Roy Harroun, Joe Dawson, Dave Buck and Louis Heluenan, Homer George. The Marmon cars, which are of the 1911 vintage, are equipped with four-cylinder motors of 415-inch bore, by a 6½-inch stroke. Both of these cars are also entered in the Grand Prize event, which will be run on October 15. The Marmon will also be represented in the Wheatley Hills race which was won last year by a Marmon stock car equipped with a 4½ engine.

The national team, headed by Jack Atkin, the Bron, Louler, Simplex, Marquette-Buick, Apperson, Alco and Pope Hartford cars, it is said, will also be on hand for the opening day's practice, and, if this be true, the cars should be better prepared for the contest than in any previous race where the tryouts have been left to the last few days, to the great detriment of their chances.

S. M. Butler, chairman of the contest board of the American Automobile Association announces that the board has issued sanctions for the following events: September 20, 21 and 22, reliability contest, Louisville Automobile Club; September 24, track meet, Belmont Driving Park; Norristown Automobile Club; October 21, track meet at Springfield, Ill., Illinois State Fair; October 14 to 18, reliability tour, Washington to Richmond, Washington Post; November 3, 4 and 5, track meet on Atlanta Automobile Speedway, Atlanta Automobile Association; November 10, 12 and 13, track meet, San Antonio Automobile Club. The board has also issued sanctions to the Dutchess County Fair for an exhibition between an automobile and an aeroplane at Poughkeepsie in October.

The Chalmers Company has finally gained possession of the Glidden trophy for 1910. At the end of this year's run there was some unpleasantness regarding the award, and the matter was referred to the courts. Justice Putnam of the New York Supreme Court has sustained the decision of the contest board of the American Automobile Association in awarding the Glidden trophy to the Chalmers Company, thereby vacating the injunction brought by the Pruden Company.

LOTTIE GILSON, NOTED ACTRESS, WHO IS DYING

LOTTIE GILSON

LOTTIE GILSON, OLD FOOTLIGHT IDOL, IS DYING

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Lottie Gilson, "The Little Magnet," and once a Broadway favorite, has been removed from a barely furnished room to a New York hospital. She was said to be dying because of lack of funds. The surgeons say she will never leave the hospital alive.

Miss Gilson, who is only thirty-nine years old, carried New York by storm when she first began to trip to the centre of the stage and with "now all together, boys," encouraged her audiences to join in the chorus of her songs. She was the first singer to adopt this method of popularizing a song. She dropped from sight, as actresses will do, not to reappear until a few weeks ago, when she accepted an engagement at a Fort George music hall.

Soon Lost He Engagement.

New Yorkers shook their heads in sorrow, but that is as far as their sympathy went. Few journeyed up to the resort where "The Little Magnet" was performing four times a day, and she soon lost her engagement.

On Friday last, two young men engaged a room for her in the little flat of Charles Schwab, on the third floor of No. 208 West Thirty-ninth street. Schwab's family has gone away for a while and he had an extra room. The men announced that they represented the Actors' Fund Society and that they wished a room for a destitute member of the profession. Schwab set his price, but they said it was too high. Negotiations seemed off until one of the men said he guessed they would have to find another shelter for "The Little Magnet." Schwan asked if she was the real "Little Magnet." When told she was he agreed to take her in for he had often, as a youth, joined in the choruses of her songs.

Soon a carriage drove up to the door and the once popular singer was carried up to the room. Schwab remonstrated, saying she appeared ill, and told the men he was alone. He said she needed care, but they went away, saying they would summon a physician.

On Friday night Schwab did what he could to comfort the actress, but the physician never came. Saturday and Sunday passed, and still no word from the doctor. Monday the men returned, and seeing her weakened condition called a policeman, who sent a "sick and destitute call."

Dr. Cowan answered the call, and, an ambulance took the woman to his hospital and later to Bellevue.

HAS BLACK LIST OF EX-BANK OFFICERS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—The National Association of Supervisors of State Banks is in convention here. Comptroller Murray, Comptroller of the Currency, in an address proposed to the State supervisors a working cooperation with the national bank examiners. He declared he had in his office a list of men who, as officers of national banks, had proved untrustworthy and had been removed from office, and said that if any of them should make application to organize State banks their names would be furnished to the State banking authorities. In turn he proposed that the State supervisors should furnish to the national system the names of men who had been driven out of the State banks.

WHITE GETS $15,500 FOR FLYING AT FAIR

The managers of the Brockton Fair announce that they have just closed a contract with Claude-Grahame-White, the daring English aviator, whereby they are to pay him $15,500 in puke flights each day of the big fair, October 4, 5 6 and 7. Mr. White leads the field at the great meet at Squantum and is the only one who has made the Boston Light trip for the $10,000 prize. He is also the champion aviator of England, holding the record for the longest flight there and noted for having made several flights at night. He has also carried more passengers than any other English aviator and is acknowledged the most famous one in England.

CENSUS WINNERS ANNOUNCED SUNDAY

Winners in the great Boston American census contest will be announced in the next issue of the Sunday American. Those who have come the nearest in their guesses as to the population of Boston, according to official census figures, will be awarded the prizes. There has been much interest in the contest. Many readers who did not compete would like to learn how near any other persons came in forecasting what would be the total tabulation of census taken. Of course all who guessed will want to know how near right they were, and whether they or somebody else are the prize winners. All that will be disclosed in the Boston Sunday American on September 18 next.

GRACE VAN STUDDIFORD A BANKRUPT

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Grace Van Studdiford, the opera singer, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities $20,901 and assets $10 cash, deposited with the Hudson Trust Company, and any interest she may have in some real estate and Rivestock, etc., at Wellston, Mo., and in ninety-eight shares of stock of the Grace Van Studdiford Amusement Company, a Missouri corporation, all of which is either mortgaged or pledged.

She has furniture consisting of a dining room set of seven pieces, a bedroom set of four pieces, four gowns, two coats and two hats, all exempt. Of her liabilities $16,000 is secured and $3,027 is debts of the Grace Van Studdiford Amusement Company.

John W. Thompson of St. Louis claims $16,000 for money loaned to her and the company between 1904 and 1910. He is secured by a deed or a mortgage on property on Lockland road, Wellston, St. Louis County. He also has as security ninety-eight shares of stock of the amusement company. The entire security is valued at $50,000. Miss Van Studdiford does not remember whether she gave Mr. Thompson a mortgage or deed. There are a number of other creditors.

EXPLORERS CHART NORTHERN LANDS

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Professor Donald B. MacMillan of Worcester Academy, who accompanied Commander Peary in his trip to the North Pole, sent word to friends here that his party that explored the land West of Davis Inlet had been successful. In a despatch from Labrador, Professor MacMillan says:

"We have pulled off our trip successfully. Our plan was to strike due West from Davis Inlet, across country through an unexplored section until we came to the George River and home of the Nascaupee Indians. We did all that we planned and more.

Out of the Beaten Path

"Gophers" Steal a Cab.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Patrolman Cash was at Fifty-first street and Tenth avenue at midnight, when a limousine stopped at the corner and "Humpty" Logan, a notorious member of the "Gopher Gang," descended from the driver's seat. The door opened and Valentine Blum, another "Gopher," emerged. A moment after a man ran up and said the men had taken his cab from Fortieth street and Eighth avenue. Cash arrested the two. In Yorkville Court the hackman refused to make a complaint, and Cash told Magistrate Corrigan that he could hold him so. So the Magistrate sent them to the Workhouse for six months.

Blind Horse Finds a Shoe.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Big Joe, a blind horse that has worked for years on the Cunard Line piers, beat the record for horse sense. He walked through various streets to a blacksmith shop, between Washington and West streets, where he always has been shod. Entering he lifted up his right foreleg. The blacksmith found the shoe loose. After it was nailed on the horse walked to the pier and was hitched up.

Horse Does Back Somersault.

LENOX, Mass., Sept. 13.—Alexander St. John Bridge of New York, who is staying at the Aspinwall, was out driving with a Kentucy thoroughbred. The horse suddenly took fright at a speeding automobile and, rearing, fell over backward into the carriage and upon Bridge. He was stunned for a time, but escaped with only a few bruises. The carriage was smashed and the horse was ranged after a short flight.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Samuel Stein, cutlery dealer at No. 170 Orchard street, lost $100 worth of stock through burglars. He bought a new padlock, but for convenience hung the key over the door. Next night he was robbed of another $100 worth and the robbers left a jeering note.

Auto Knocks Out a Bull.

BRANCHVILLE, N. J., Sept. 13.—To ex-Mayor N. H. Hopkins belongs the honor of being the first on record to officiate at an encounter between an automobile and a bull, and being able to register the fact that the bull was only second best.

Sings Way Into Jail.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Antonio Martello, who lives at 581 Robbins avenue, the Bronx, has gone to jail for thirty days for serenading women at One Hundred and Forty-Ninth street and Robbins avenue late at night.

"American's Crusade Ten Years Ago Won United States Right to Fortify Panama Canal; Nothing in Morals or Law to Prevent," Says Creelman

'THE CITIZEN WHO ENCOURAGES REVIVAL OF ALIEN INTERFERENCE IS EITHER A FOOL OR A TRAITOR'

BY JAMES CREELMAN.

The mere suggestion that Great Britain may protest against the fortification of the Panama Canal by the United States is enough to make every decent American's blood lie up with indignation. Nor is at all unlikely that the old conspiracy of America a transcontinental railways will attempt again to delay the opening of the n ality enterprise, on which the nation is spending perhaps $375,000,000, by so cretly promoting international embarrassments in a question involving the rig ht of the United. States to prepare to defend its own canal against its enem ies in time of war or threatened war.

That was the very game surrendered by Great Britain less than ten years ago, when Secretary Hay and Ambassador Pauncefote attempted a treaty forbidding the fortification or blockading of the canal under any circumstances, even by the U nited States, and bringing the great Powers into the affairs of the American continent by formally inviting them to assist in keeping the canal open, in peace and in war, to the vessels of all nations, even to the ships of nations at war with the United States.

It was the powerful and sleepless crusade of the New York American in 1900 that aroused the manhood of the American people to the degrading injustice, as well as the far-reaching national peril involved in this amazing abandonment of the right of the nation—which was about to sever the American hemisphere into two continents by placing it with a naval high way—to use its own property to defend itself in time of war.

There can be no doubt that it was the patriotic and convincing broadside poured out day after day and week after week from the columns of the American that made it impossible for Senator Davis and the statesmen who stood with him in the United States Senate to defeat the Hay-Pauncefote plan of surrender.

Mr. Davis frankly acknowledged the power of the agitation thus begun. Senator Morgan, leader of the Democratic opposition to the stupid featured bill by Mr. Hay, afterward declared that if it had not been for the "damnable good humpiering" of the American, and the passionate protests which it provoked in all parts of the country, the Hay-Pauncefote treaty would have been forced through the Senate, the United States would have been debarred from fortifying the canal, and the American people—to the great satisfaction of the otherwise brazen railway conspirators—would never have consented to spend hundreds of millions of dollars in constructing a maritime channel severing the American continents which their enemies might use on equal terms with themselves.

When President McKinley sent the original Hay-Pauncefote treaty to the Senate on February 5, 1900, Secretary Hay declared that such an agreement was voided necessary by the existence of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty of 1850, in which the United States and Great Britain agreed not to colonize or exercise dominion in Central America, and further stipulated that no fortifications should be permitted on a canal route across the Isthmus connecting North and South America.

It was promptly shown that Great Britain had violated the Clayton Bulwer treaty by extending her protectorate to British Honduras, and that the United States Government had repeatedly declared the treaty to be "extinct."

Then Mr. Hay fell back to another line of defense. It was vital that in time of war such a costly and important work as an American canal should not be defended by other nations as an international thoroughfare.

It was promptly shown that Great Britain was violating the Clayton-Bulwer treaty by attempting to dictate the canal policy of the United States, and further stipulated that no fortifications should be permitted on a canal route across the Isthmus connecting North and South America.

It was promptly shown that Great Britain had violated the Clayton Bulwer treaty by extending her protectorate to British Honduras, and that the United States Government had repeatedly declared the treaty to be "extinct."

Then Mr. Hay fell back to another line of defense. It was vital that in time of war such a costly and important work as an American canal should not be defended by other nations as an international thoroughfare.

The treaty provided that "the canal shall be free and open to the vessels of commerce and of war, as well in time of peace as in time of war, on terms of entire equality." It also provided that means through which her all-powerful navy could attack the weakest points on our coast.

"the canal shall not be blockaded, nor shall any right of war be exercised, nor any act of hostility be committed within it," and that "no fortification shall be erected commanding the canal or the waters adjacent."

Having revived the dead Clayton Bulwer Treaty by asking the permission of Great Britain to build an American canal with American money, Secretary Hay was not only attempting to destroy the value of its military value to the United States, but to confess the inability of the American people to defend the canal by entering into a formal alliance with Great Britain to protect it.

The absurdity of leaving the canal defenseless and relying upon Great Britain for its neutrality was plain to be seen by the fact that every time that Great Britain herself might be at war with the United States and that a neutrality treaties to the contrary notwithstanding, an unfortified American canal would be the very means through which her all-powerful navy could attack the weakest points on our coast.

President McKinley expected the Senate to ratify the astonishing bargain negotiated by Mr. Hay; yet even that master of men could not contend against the continent wide agitation stirred up under the leadership of the American and other newspapers which supported its patriotic protest against the shame of an abject surrender to British diplomacy. In editorials, news columns and cartoons, the dangerous and humiliating features of the treaty were exposed, lashed, ridiculed.

No American will question the honesty or patriotism of Mr. Hay. This was a blunder.

But Mr. Hay was proud and sensitive. His suffering under public criticism or ridicule was almost unbelievable. In the midst of the fight against the ratification of the treaty I saw Mr. Hay actually shed tears, and he choked with emotion as he protested against the "cruelty and injustice" of the American's inexorable war against it.

Pauncefote was in Despair.

Poor old Lord Pauncefote! The portly British Ambassador went about in those days with a look of dejection and despair on his usually genial countenance, and as he shook his head in sorrow over the depravity and brutality of the American and its newspaper allies.

At first the McKinley administration claimed to have more than the necessary two-thirds majority in the Senate. The White House was inundated with protest against surrender to Great Britain.

Ban on Fortification Stood.

In the end the treaty was amended so that none of the provisions forbidding special rights in the canal should apply "to measures which the United States may find it necessary to take for securing by its own forces the defense of the United States and the maintenance of public order."

The agreement to invite "the other Powers" to adhere to the neutrality agreement was stricken out. In this emasculated form the treaty was ratified by the Senate. Yet the paragraph forbidding fortification of the canal was allowed to stand.

Great Britain rejected the treaty, principally on the ground stated by Lord Lansdowne:

"If the new clause were to be added, the obligation to respect the neutrality of the canal in all circumstances would, so far as Great Britain is concerned, remain in force; the obligation of the United States, on the other hand, would be essentially modified. The result would be a one-sided arrangement, under which Great Britain would be debarred from any warlike action in or around the canal, while the United States would be liable to resort to such action, to whatever extent they might deem necessary to secure their own safety."

The Hay-Pauncefote scheme having been defeated, the American Government was placed in the embarrassing position of abandoning the great canal enterprise because Great Britain would not give her permission, or violating the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, which Mr. Hay had recognized, in spite of the fact that it had been cancelled by the British.

Nothing to Stop Fortification.

Then there arose in the United States a fierce and general demand that the canal should be built and fortified, with or without the consent of Great Britain. To ring one of this sudden outburst of American sentiment, Great Britain wisely submitted a new treaty providing for the neutralization of the canal on the general principles applied to the Suez Canal, but omitting the clause prohibiting the United States from fortifying or defending it, or closing it to the forces of an enemy in time of war.

There is nothing in morals, in law, or in the interests of peace and international amity to prevent the United States from providing for the defense of its splendid naval highway between the two Americas; and the American who encourages any revival of foreign interference by liberating the idea of an unfortified Panama Canal either a fool or a traitor to the interests of his country and his future.

There are some things, thank God, about which patriots and men do not quarrel, and it is this fact gives us our distinctive national consistency, without which all the blood sacrificed for our form of government has been shed in vain.

Ours is the first government founded in a moral idea—the inherent political equality of the whole human race. We have been able to continue that noble experiment upon which the political salvation of mankind may depend without converting our continent into a vast military camp of defence or crushing our population with taxes to support an overwhelmingly great, or simply because the seas in we given to us the protection of physical isolation.

No trickery of professional diplomacy should be permitted to undo us as a nation. After all, there is a higher law than the law of technical interpretation. Nothing can be more certain than that the United States Senate would never have ratified the final Hay-Pauncefote treaty had it not been clearly understood, both by the President and the Senators, that Great Britain had withdrawn all opposition to the fortification of the canal.

Condition of Treaty's Authorization.

But for the abandonment of the clause forbidding the United States to fortify the canal the treaty never would have been ratified. Having taken an active part in the agitation and having discussed the matter with many Senators at the time it was ratified, I can bear witness to the fact that the new proposals of Great Britain were accepted simply because it was believed that she in good faith had withdrawn all objection to the defence of the canal by the United States and had substituted the general neutrality principles of the Suez Canal regulations.

No responsible member of the British Government, from the Premier Minister to the Ambassador at Washington, could have been in doubt as to what the American Government understood the treaty to mean.

The unconcealed arrangements with the Panama Republic for the right to provide formal defences, the open preparations by Congress to provide for the erection of fortifications, the universally recognized fact that the American people were almost unanimously opposed to the construction of our its treasure in piercing the vitals of a canal which their enemies could use in war time on equal terms with themselves—those things demonstrate the spirit in which the United States accepted the treaty. To attempt any other interpretation after the United States has poured out its treasure in piercing the vitals of the hemisphere argues the morals of a card cheat.

The American people, regardless of parties, should unite to meet this emergency, trample all cunning technicalities under their feet and show that they are not less ready to defend their rights than the generation which uttered and enforced the Monroe D[octrine].

MAINE DEMOCRATS ELECT GOVERNOR AND TWO CONGRESSMEN IN LANDSLIDE

Republicans Are Swept From Power After Thirty Years of Rule.

for Governor and her attitude on the issues of the campaign generally, the plurality given to Major Plaisted being decisively large.

In the face of the sweeping Democratic victory, the Republican leaders were overwhelmed with surprise, and the magnitude of their success astonished even the most sanguine of Democrats. It was the first beating the Republicans of Maine, the State of Blaine and Reed, have had in thirty years.

Out-of-the-State speakers, including Congressman McKinlay of California, Congressman Foss and Mayor Fitzgerald of Massachusetts came here to help win the Democratic victory.

Close political observers, however, could hear mutterings, not loud but deep. The so-called "Old Guard" had to stand a lot of party criticism and even the leaders were out of harmony with a new element which had begun to manifest itself, especially in the western part of the State.

It was hoped among the backers of the administration of Governor Fernald that this unrest would subside and much dependence was placed upon the old-time loyalty of the farming vote in the back counties.

But insurgency was in the air. The rural voter had been absorbing ideas of the State as well as to it, and this was particularly manifested in the Third District, where Congressman Burleigh, with an eighteen years' record at Washington, found himself closely pressed by his old-time opponent, Samuel W. Gould of Skowhegan.

Chased Burleigh 30 Years.

That the senior member of the Maine Congressional delegation should be in danger of his political life after winning election after election by tremendous margins was perhaps one of the most startling of the day's results.

"I've been chasing Burleigh for thirty years," said Mr. Gould to-night, "and, by George, it looks as if I had about caught him."

The returns certainly seemed to indicate such a result, but the Third District runs up the Kennebec River from the coast to the Canadian line, and more complete figures may alter the situation, although Chairman Byron Boyd of the Republican State Committee has conceded Burleigh's defeat.

In any event, the contest in the Third District was of national importance, for Mr. Burleigh made a late campaign, and the great reduction in his vote must mean more than State-wide unrest. Congressman Burleigh has admitted his defeat.

The victory of Daniel J. McGillicuddy of Lewiston, in the Second District, was thought fairly probable, as Congressman John P. Swasey of Canton narrowly missed defeat in his first election two years ago.

Hinds Wins in First.

In the First district Asher C. Hinds, whose talents as a parliamentarian were discovered years ago by Thomas B. Reed, and who has sat behind half a dozen speakers, including Joseph G. Cannon, was given a hard fight by Former Sheriff William M. Pennell, and the latter's election was also conceded by Mr. Boyd.

Whether insurgency spread as far as the Fourth district and up into Aroostook county, where Congressman Frank E. Guernsey of Dover was opposed by George Hanson of Calais, was not disclosed by the early returns.

Senators Elected.

First district—Nathan Clifford (D.), Ira C. Foss (D.), Howard Winslow (D.), Henry W. Moulton (D.).

Second district—H. G. Foss, Auburn (D.); Dr. M. O. Edwards, Lewiston (D.); Lindley M. Staples (D.).

DEMOCRATS WIN ARIZONA ELECTION ON REFERENDUM

PHOENIX, Ariz., Sept. 13.—Unofficial figures available indicate the Democrats are certain of a majority of the fifty-two delegates to the constitutional convention.

The Democrats made the campaign on a pledge to incorporate the initiative and referendum and amend the State Constitution. The Republicans contended that these questions should be decided after the Constitution was adopted.

FIRST DEMOCRATIC MAYOR OF AUGUSTA IN FORTY YEARS

Frederick William Plaisted was born in Bangor on June 20, 1865, the son of General Harris Plaisted. He was educated in the public schools of Bangor and St. Johnsbury, where he was graduated in 1884. He began work as a newspaper man in 1885, as editor of the North Star at bought out the partner, and in 1898 conbought out the partner, and in 1898 conducted the paper alone.

He is one of the best known men in the State of Maine. He was the Democratic candidate for Congress in the third district in 1897 and 1898, but was defeated.

Sheriff Two Years.

In 1899 he was made Mayor of Augusta, and was reelected to that office in 1907 and 1908. He was defeated for Mayor the following year, only to win again in 1910. He was the first Democratic Mayor to be elected for forty years.

Mr. Plaisted was elected sheriff of Kennebec County for two years in September, 1906, being the first Democratic sheriff since the county was established, in 1799.

He served ten years on the village district school board, and was its chairman for three years.

He was delegate-at-large to the Democratic National Convention at Chicago in 1908, and at Kansas City in 1900. He was for four years a member of the State Congressional committee of his party, and was chairman of the Democratic State convention in 1908.

Prominent Mason.

He is prominent in Free Masonry, taking an active part in the erection of the Augusta Masonic Temple in 1894. He was grand high priest of the grand Royal Arch Chapter in 1901, and grand commander of the Grand Commandery of Maine in 1902. He is a member of the Bethlehem Lodge, Cushnoc Chapter, Alpha Council and Trinity Commandery, Knights Templar. He is a 32d degree Mason in the Scottish Rite. He is also trustee of the Augusta Masonic Building Association, a trustee of the Lithgow Public Library, an incorporator of the Augusta Saving Bank, a director of the Augusta General Hospital, and holds membership in the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, the Sons of Veterans, the Alnaki Club, and the Augusta and Cobbosseecontee Yacht Clubs.

He was married February 10, 1897, to Miss Frances Gulliver, daughter of the late Captain Henry Gulliver of Milbridge.

AUGUSTA GREETS RETURNS WITH 13 BIG BONFIRES

AUGUSTA, Me., Sept. 13. — Great crowds gathered around Colonel Plaisted's office to listen to the election returns which, for a time came in rather slowly, but with the results from all the large places showing Plaisted pluralities there was great cheering and the whole front of the office was blocked with people.

The throng became so large that it was necessary to adjourn to city hall, where the returns were read from the stage to a crowd that packed the building. When it was determined that Plaisted was elected the uproar was almost deafening, and bonfires were started on the outskirts of the city.

Colonel Plaisted received scores of telegrams from leading Democrats all over the State and one telegram from a New York paper asking for his interpretation of the landslide, to which he replied to the crowd publicly.

As soon as the news came that three of the Democratic congressional candidates had won, the people in the hall could hardly console themselves, hundreds trying to push forward to grasp the hands of Colonel Plaisted for congratulation.

McGILLICUDDY WAS TWICE BEFORE IN RACE FOR CONGRESS

Daniel J. McGillicuddy, elected to Congress from the Second Maine district on the Democratic ticket, is a lawyer by profession. He was born in Lewiston in August 27, 1859, and was graduated from Bowdoin College in the class of 1881. He married Miss Minnie M. Sprague in Lewiston on July 6, 1898. He was admitted to the bar and has practised at Lewiston since 1883. He was elected Mayor of that city in 1887, 1890 and 1902, and was a member of the State Legislature in 1884-5. He has twice been run as candidate for Congress. His home address is Lewiston, Me.

GOULD WAS ONCE CANDIDATE FOR MAINE GOVERNOR

Samuel Wadsworth Gould, elected to Congress from the Third District on the Democratic ticket, is a lawyer. He was born at Porter, Me., January 1, 1855, and was educated in the common schools at Hiram, North Parsonsfield Seminary and the University of Maine, from which institution he received his bachelor's degree in the class of 1877. He was married in Gorham, Me., in 1879 to Nellie L. Winslow.

Since January 1, 1880, he has practised law at Skowhegan, Me., of which city he was Postmaster 1886-1909. He was the Democratic candidate for Governor in 1902.

M'GILLICUDDY'S MAJORITY OVER SWASEY IS 3,000

LEWISTON, Me., Sept. 13.—D. J. McGillicuddy of Lewiston (Democrat) was elected Congressman from the Second District over Congressman John P. Swasey (Republican) by a majority of 3,000.

Returns from 102 cities and towns give McGillicuddy 17,769, Swasey 14,858. The same towns two years ago gave McGillicuddy 14,311, Swasey 17,224.

McGillicuddy carried four of the six counties in the district. Androscoggin giving him the largest plurality, 2,420; Knox was second, with over 100. Oxford and Franklin went for Swasey.

INDICATES GENERAL VICTORY, DECLARES CHAIRMAN MACK

NEW YORK, Sept 13.—Norman E. Mack of Buffalo, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said when the latest figures were given him:

"All that I can say now is that the expressions of sentiment which have been coming in to us from all over the country indicated the possibility of such a result, but, of course, it's almost too good to be true.

"What does it indicate? You don't need to ask me that—It indicates a sweeping Democratic victory from coast to coast."

LEADERS OF BOTH PARTIES COMMENT ON MAINE VOTE

Comments on the Maine election result were made to-day by the following leaders of both parties:

GOVERNOR FERNALD:

I have no doubt from the returns at hand that Mr. Plaisted has been elected by from 3000 to 5000. I don't understand why the vote should take such a sudden change in all parts of the State.

SENATOR LODGE:

I am very sorry. I have heard but little relative to the results of the election and the size of the pluralities of the successful Democratic candidates. I attribute the election of Plaisted as Governor largely to local conditions peculiar to Maine. The Sturgis law and the question of reapportioning it to the people had its effect upon the vote throughout the State.

CONGRESSMAN PETERS:

The results are most satisfactory and show an awakening of the people to the fact that the Republican party has deceived them. It shows that the people are determined that the government of the country shall not go out of their hands, and it is a rebuke to the framers of the Payne-Aldrich tariff. It assures a Democratic Congress.

CONGRESSMAN JOHN W. WEEKS:

I rather expected such news. It seems to me that there was no gain in Republican with the Sturgiss law that naturally it must at some time influence the people at the polls. Of course the election of a Democratic Governor makes history for Maine, for it is more than fifty years since the like happened. I think the temperance question largely influenced the results.

CONGRESSMAN J. A. KELLIHER:

Plaisted's election indicates the changing political sentiment of the whole country. What has happened in Maine will happen this Fall in Massachusetts. The demoralization of the Republican party is now clearly apparent.

WATCH POSLAM WORK

Results Are Seen After a Single Application.

Anyone wishing to test poslam, the new skin remedy, for the rapidity of its action should select a red spot or small part of a surface where the skin is extensively broken out. Poslam should be applied on this place at night and results noted in the morning by comparison with the surrounding skin, which has not been treated. Surprising results are seen, particularly when poslam is used for red and inflamed noses, fever blisters, pimples, rash, scaly scalp, itching feet, sunburn, etc. The beneficial action of this new healing agent in eczema, acne, psoriasis, barber's itch, piles, etc., begins with first application, when all itching is stopped, and continues unremittingly until its work is done. Cases of these troubles of years' standing have been completely eradicated by poslam after other remedies were abandoned as ineffectual.

A special 50-cent package of poslam is prepared for minor uses and this, as well as the regular $2 jar, is on sale by all druggists, particularly all Riker-Jaynes drug stores and Houghton & Dutton's Drug Dept.

A sample of poslam, which will afford a convincing test, will be sent by mail, free of charge, to anyone who will write to the Emergency Laboratories, 32 West 25th street, New York City.

the failure of H. Chandler Egan of Chicago, the runner-up at Chicago last year, to make the second qualifying round. Egan's score for the eighteen holes was eighty-seven, just one stroke too high to land him among the sixty-four qualifiers. This is the poorest score Egan ever brought home in a national tournament.

Extra Local Players.

The two extra local players added to the sixty-four qualifiers through today early playing are Francis Ouimet of Woodland G. C., and Thomas R. Fuller of Wollaston G. C. Ouimet is a Brookline High School boy and was interscholastic champion last year. Fuller is the amateur champion of Massachusetts.

Dranmor of Montclair, who led in the finishing play-in-day, is a fast player. Watson of Westbrook is secretary of the U. S. Golf Association. Robert A. Gardner of Hinsdale Golf Club of Chicago, is the present champion and was expected, of course, to make the second qualifying round. Seckel of Riverside Golf Club, is the Princeton champion.

The second qualifying round started at 7:30, with S. P. Burton of Brookhaven Golf Club, pairing with George Arnuton, Ekwanok Golf Club. The second pair was made up of P. W. Whittemore, Country Club, and W. J. Stiles, Rue Rue. This brought two Boston players together, though not to match play.

Drawings for the first round of match play, best 32 scores to qualify, was scheduled to be made before the sun play start at two o'clock and matches to be for 18 holes.

CAN MACK'S PITCHERS BEAT CUBS' BATTERS

PHILADELPHIA Sept. 13.—With the Cubs and Athletics sure winners respectively in the National and American league races, baseball fans are now comparing the two teams that will battle for the world's title.

Comparable strength of teams often is meaningless in a short series of games like the world's contests. On paper the Athletics compare favorably with champions. Take the Cubs, for instance. The Mackmen are their equal in fielding, have a shade on them in batting, and in pitching strength are only the Cubs' equal in catching, the Cubs have a distinct advantage.

Both have crack infields. Chance, Evers, Tinker and Steinfeldt form a tried and reliable quartet that was good enough to pilot Chicago to two world's championships and three pennants. In fielding, batting and generalship the four men are superb.

Cubs Have Great Infield.

The Athletics' infield is not as old as Chicago's, but the four men have been associated with each other long enough to work together with precision and harmony. They are fielding infield in every way, the very best in the American league. Collins, Barry and Baker of the Mackmen league's best baseman who has held his position undisputed since the league was organized. That in itself is pretty good proof of his value as a player.

Davis today is a hard hitter, fast fielder and the best field captain in the league. Chance is a successful manager and Davis a captain, but it would be absurd to think that Davis won't handle the place as they some just as shrewdly as Chance. Of course, Davis is not a Bed general and the Athletics' tactical program will be the work of Mack, but on the diamond Chance won't be one whit keener than Davis in sizing up plays.

Great Duel Expected.

Collins and Evers will have a great duel themselves. Both are hard hitters, ready to see an extra base at any time and series it. Evers is regarded by many as knowing more baseball than any player in the rank and file.

He is a thorough student of the sport, and is constantly helping the Cubs with shrewd and level use two more expert judges of a fly ball. Lord has the ball in the infield games by his quick thinking. But what of Collins? Nobody who has watched his work ever thought him a mental laggard. On the contrary, he has grasped the fine points of the sport better than any man on the team excepting Davis.

Collins has that inspiring, battling style, is endowed with a half-trigger brain, knows how to play for batsmen and has all the qualities that make a star ballplayer. He is just as good a fielder as Evers and his superior as a hitter and baserunner is clear. This does not place Mack's second baseman at any disadvantage in comparison, good as Evers is.

Tinker and Barry Equal.

Tinker and Barry at shortstop are about standoffs. In many ways Barry is the American League model if Tinker, Bota are fast fielders, who cover much ground and can whip the ball to first from any position. At any time Barry is likely to break up a game with a long hit, and so is Tinker.

Steinfeldt is a steadier third baseman than Baker. The Mack player is a great third baseman, but his predilection to operate throwing makes the Chicago crack the more reliable man, at least in fielding. In base running Baker far outshines Steinfeldt, while he is also a much harder hitter. His superiority on the inside should offset any advantage Steinfeldt has on the defense.

Lord Big Factor.

The two outfields are not exactly brilliant, but they are steady. The addition of Lord has made the Athletics' outfield strong at every point. There are no Ty Cobbs and Tris Speakers on the teams, but every one ranks high in fielding.

Rudy Murphy and Oldring are great hitters. Oldring is playing the best ball of his career. He is a young fellow, who is as fast as a bullet and sleuthing hitter. Hofman, the Cubs' center fielder, is also having a big season, so there is little to choose in centre field.

In right Murphy is a better man than Schulte. He covers the smallest flawlessly, has an iron arm and is a great clever hitter. He has a better brain than Schulte, who knows much about batting, but has a sluggish temperament.

Lord throwing arm in the American League and kills many a batting rally by the accurate and long throws which he whips

COAKLEY UNDER BAN OF BASEBALL BOARD

CINCINNATI, Sept. 13.—Pitcher Andy Coakley, formerly of the Chicago Nationals, Louisville, Elmira, N. Y., and other professional baseball teams, has been placed on the ineligible list of organized baseball by the National Commission. The ban is extended to include the Paterson, N. J., team, of which Coakley is a member. The action followed complaints that the New York American and National League teams had played exhibition games with Paterson, an examination of the records showing that Coakley had been suspended by the National Association of Minor League Clubs.

PROVIDENCE STAR SOLD TO RED SOX

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 13.—Pitcher Finlayson of the Lawrence baseball team has reported to Manager Collins of the Providence Grays. He will be given a chance against Jersey City. Elston, the grays' left fielder, has been sold to the Boston Americans, but will not play there this Fall.

RED SOX BID BOSTON GOOD BYE FOR SEASON

By SID WHIPPLE.

It's almost all over. This is the dying gasp of the American League game in Boston for 1910, for after to-day we won't see the boys again until some time next Spring.

The Speed Boys have won themselves into favor again by copping two games from the Yankees yesterday, and win or lose to-day, they got what they wanted when the Red Sox pulled out a majority of this series.

The Speed Boys, say what you will, have had the goods this year at home. Except on a few occasions—chiefly those when the Athletics were here—they have given the enthusiasts just about what they were looking for. You'd rather have your team win at home, where you could see them, than in some foreign clime where you couldn't do anything but read the newspapers about it and imagine how it all looked, wouldn't you? Well, what more do you want?

These last games ought to make everybody happy. John L. Taylor certainly is. He ought to be, for he's been getting 7000 bonuses galore out there opposite the Boston Opera House, and the way the fans have flocked in to buy tickets of John this year it is a pretty safe bet that it is that they got their money's worth. So they helped to help Mack about, either.

Won 51 Games Here.

Now, John has already written all about the home history of the Red Sox during the season of 1910. But he seemed to dwell rather on the glories of the wondrous large crowds that patronized the game here in Boston and the little money attendances that characterized the games abroad, than the history, glorious or not, just as you want to look at it, of the players themselves on the local diamond. Well, they have done and who's who.

Accordingly, here goes. They have won 51 games out in their old home, and to-day will settle whether or not they win the fifty-second. They have lost 37, nine of which went to the Athletics and six to the Yankees. The other teams have been uniformly unsuccessful.

Chicago and Washington have been heavy losers to the Speed Boys when the latter were on their own playing ground. The White Sox and the Senators wrested but four games from the Speed Boys out of eleven played here. The Tigers did little better, but only four out of the eleven. The Highlanders have captured but two out of the seven. The Connie Mack guards dropped only a couple to E. Dooyman's merry company.

Of course, the home series was the one best bet of the year. It makes you dizzy to think of what happened to the visitors during those halcyon days of the hot summer. Things looked by and a real good fan with an imaginative mind could actually see the target land with a thud in the giant blooming in the breeze where the American flag now flies. Then was the happy days!

Fought Hard to Win.

But either the fans didn't wish hard enough or else didn't "project their minds" as far as the Windy City, for the return from the West was a No. Bonaparte's retreat from the City of the Czar. But E. Dooyman's outmarched his army and went into the field again, with the result that after they got home once more they forgot about marching and went to build West.

So they just waited in ambush for the White Sox. Likewise for Cleveland. Also for the Browns. And what's more, they handed things out so strong for a few days behind the barking of their own bulldog that the visitors went home with but one game to show for where they'd been. That was Big Ed Walsh's game, when there was the Athletics. But that's another story.

The Highlanders started well last week by winning a poorly played game. There wasn't much left for them, at that. Then they dropped three straight, and everybody was willing for the fourth. Thus ends the season.

Taylor is satisfied. He says so. Ditto P. Donovan, who says likewise. And Jake Stahl is content to be. Accordingly it is all very satisfactory, all the way around and back again.

COLLINS'S WORK IN BOX GRAND; FISHER'S WAS JUST OPPOSITE

Well, how does it seem to be back in second place again? Thanks to the good willows of the Speed Boys in the sixth inning, and the ability to the woods by Pitcher Fisher in the ninth inning, the second game of the day went to the Red Sox, and New York goes down to fourth place.

The first game was just the ordinary sort of a contest. Ray Collins pitched a corking game. He didn't strike out so very many men, to be sure, but he was steady all the way through, and pitched regular shutout ball. In fact his exhibition was the steadiest seen on the Huntington Avenue grounds since the first of last week. The boys backed him up well, and were present with the big stick and the double plays when they were needed. New York didn't come even close to scoring, and the only fair sized hit made off the old Vermont pitcher was Daniels's in the first inning, a two-sacker. After that there was no doing, and only three hits were registered on him during the entire nine innings.

The second game was a circus. Slugging won the game, and then the same slugging by New York nearly lost it, the magnificent work of Mr. Fisher of New York, who was in the box, giving Boston a present of the game.

Brother Fisher is a finished pitcher. He did everything a pitcher could do in the last inning except to strike out man. He gave two bases on balls, made an error, made a balk, and finally forced the winning run across the plate by hitting Tris Speaker when the bases were full.

The game was an extraordinary one from every standpoint. Boston started right off in the first inning, Hooper beating out a bunt. Wagner sacrificed, and then Tris Speaker's single sent Harry Hooper home. Speaker promptly got stealing, and Stahl died. Nothing doing for New York until later. In the second inning Duffy Lewis grew argumentative when called out on strikes by Dineen, and was given the gate by Umpire Dineen, which he did. Clyde Engle taking his place in left garden.

However, in the eighth, Daniels led off with a single, and Mr. Edward Karger took a ride. Wolter followed with a single. Then Chase died out to Hooper. Knight was the handy man to have around once more, and headed out a two-sacker, scoring Daniels and Wolter. Then Jake Stahl fell down on Crede's grounder, and Knight came home, which tied the score again. The end of it all didn't come until the tenth inning, which has been explained.

Guy Dineen had his troubles yesterday. His eyesight was bad, to-day's game showed, and he was an average of a very, very close decision about every two minutes. The man was unfeeling enough to yell "rotten," which is of course to be condemned. They thought they were justified, however, and it is even whispered in prominent sporting circles where the baseball writers gather to discuss the game, that they were exceedingly justified. But of course that is nothing more than rumor.

This is the last. After to-day you'll see them no more until 1911, unless you wander out through the West.

To-day the Red Sox close their most successful season at home for years. For the fifth time in the series the Yankees oppose the Speed Boys, who yesterday won back second place by their double victory over the New Yorkers, and with four straight to his credit, if it can be managed, Patsy Donovan will again hit the road, never to return this season. Accordingly at 3 o'clock to-night it will be all over but the shouting, as far as Boston is concerned.

The team has been welded together magnificently in the last few days. It has been helped out, it is true, by poor work on the part of the Highlanders, but at the same time Boston's pitchers have got on good ball, and the team is again on edge. A victory to-day will start the team down the long road to the finish with everything in its favor for second place.

For it has been pretty well settled for some time who will win the pennant. The only interest at present in the American League race is in the three-cornered fight between the Red Sox, the Yankees and the Tigers.

DOVES TAKE ON A GAME WITH THE LYNN (N. E. L.) TEAM

The Doves are still keeping in training as well as they can. Yesterday they went to the Spindle City and trimmed the Lowell New England League team. Fred Lake received a present of a diamond stone—not glass—and extremely was happy.

To-day the Doves clash with the Lynn team of the same league, and although it is a probable that Fred will receive any more diamonds, it is likely that the Doves will win a victory.

CHANCE DEPENDS ON CUBS' TEAM PLAY TO WIN WORLD SERIES

By BILL BAILEY.

(Sporting Writer, Chicago American.)

It is pretty generally conceded that nothing short of an earthquake, a cyclone or a railroad wreck can keep the Cubs from winning the pennant in the National League and the Philadelphia Athletics from grabbing the bunting in the American.

But there is a lot of question about which will win the world's championship when these two teams line up about October 18 or 16 for the first game of that important series. Ball players, managers, magnates are divided on the question.

In Philadelphia the fans are certain that the Athletics will trim the Cubs. In Chicago the belief has developed into a certainty that Chance and his aggregation will surely cop their third wirld's flag. And that is my opinion.

Individually I think the Cubs are better ball players. Yet this is scarely their greatest advantage. As a machine I believe the Cubs have it all over the fellows who take orders from Connie Mack. And a team that plays baseball with its head as with the assembled arms, legs and hands, I believe that the West Siders have the edge on the fellows from Philadelphia. And another mighty important asset the Cubs will possess if they go into a fight with the scrap from the East will be the experience they gained in their other world's series fights. This is an asset.

In playing upon foreign soil before tremendous crowds in a crucial game the Cubs are at their best. This can scarcely be said of Connie Mack's men, otherwise they would have been in the big money ere this.

Cub Catchers Are Better.

Let's go right down the line, considering the advantages the Cubs have and those possessed by the Athletics.

Beginning behind the bat, as a matter of course, Now, will any man concede that the Athletics have a shade on the Cubs there? Mighty few. But you can find a host of fans all over the country who will tell you that the Cubs will have it on the Athletics in that mighty important department of the game.

Kling and Archer form a catching staff that is without an equal in either league. And the Athletics are going to find it mighty difficult to do any base stealing in this game.

Now, what of the Athletics? From Philadelphia comes the report that Livingston will do the catching in the big series. Livingston is a good catcher. But he isn't Kling. Kling's very much as if the Cubs had all the better of it in the catching department.

Pitchers Form Big Question.

Now, how about the pitchers?

And there is the big question of this series. Every American leaguer is building his hopes on the pitching staff that Connie Mack has. Coombs, Bender, the Indian, and Plank, the Southpaw, form it. There is also Morgan, of course, but he isn't being mentioned very prominently in this world's series talk. He is regarded as an unlucky pitcher, a fellow who pitches great ball, but is nosed out of too many games.

Well, Connie Mack certainly has a dandy pitching staff, and there is no question about that. But hasn't Chance?

Chance Depends Upon Four.

Right now he is depending upon four men to do the work of the big series. Brown, Cole, Reulbach and Overall form the quartet. The manager is of the belief that Overall will surely be right for two series. To-day he said that the big fellow was getting better every day and that he was a question of days until he would be back in the game.

Now the return of Overall means a great deal to the chances of the Cubs. He has been mighty effective in all the world's series, starting with the one between the Cubs and the White Sox in 1906. True, he didn't start a game in that series. But he stopped the Sox short on Saturday and again in the Sunday game when they were driving all the other Cub pitchers to cover. He pitched great ball against the Tigers in both the 1907 and 1908 series.

Overall a Big Factor.

With Overall out of it, the Athletics have nothing on the Cubs when it comes to pitching. With Overall in anything like form the West Siders have more than a shade the better of it.

Now, getting down to first base—for that is where every athlete has to start his tour.

The veteran Harry Davis is opposed to Manager Chance of the Cubs. Chance right now is outhitting the Athletic first baseman. And when it comes to aggressiveness the Chicago man has it on his rival. In experience, in holding the position, they may be equal.

The second base play is going to attract a lot of attention in this series. For the two stars will be in action. Evers and Collins will be opposed. Collins is the star of the infield. Evers cannot be said to be that, but he is regarded as one of the headiest ball players in the game. In hitting Collins has it on him, for the Athletic second baseman is batting .330. The Trojan is not in that class.

Tinker the Better Shortstop.

Tinker has it on Barry. Mind you, this is a one man opinion. And the fans down Philadelphia way will not agree. Tinker is hitting the ball as well as he ever did in his life. He is clouting over .300, while Barry is hitting at the rate of .253.

Now, getting over to third. Here is where the Athletic fans think they have it on the Cubs. For Baker is one of the great stars. But have they? Baker is hitting .281. Steinfeldt .238. This gives the call to the man from Philadelphia on the hitting. Baker will not outplay the Cub on the fielding end of the game. He will probably be hitting on the base lines.

In the outfield the Athletics have it on the Cubs in hitting, but not in fielding. The Athletic outfielders are batting as follows: Oldring, .319; Murphy, .306; Lord, .243. The Cub outer gardeners are swatting as follows: Hofman, .330; Schulte, .274; Sheckard, .236. The Philadelphia outfielders are hitting at a .280 clip, while the Cub gardeners are clouting .278.

But would you say with that slight difference in hitting that the fellows from Philadelphia are a better lot of outfielders than the Cubs when the speed and the general all round ball playing ability of the Cub gardeners are taken into account? I would not. Looks to me like the Cubs should win handily.

YALE SQUAD IN FIRST PRACTICE

LAKEVILLE, Ct., Sept. 13.—The opening practice of the Yale University football squad for the coming season is held here to-day on the arrival of the members of last year's team and the respective candidates. Practice will be continued here until September 27, the day before the opening of college, when the squad will go to New Haven.

Yale will commence the season with but three of the members of last year's team on the field, Captain Fred Daly, John Kilpatrick and Quarterback Howe. The preliminary practice will be devoted for the great part to familiarizing the men with the new rules.

Kilpatrick, who was Daly's close competitor in the contest for the captaincy, is not in good condition. Kilpatrick is captain of the Yale track team and he suffered several weeks this Summer preparing for the all-round championships. He re-opened his old football injury last week, but the championship and he was unable to take part. His ankle is weak and he will not play in the next game of football this Fall. Because of this injury he was unable to represent Yale in the Summer events at the intercollegiates this Spring.

It has been expected that Kilpatrick would captain the eleven this Fall in the absence of Daly, much of the time, but it is not likely that Kilpatrick will be played in the early games much more than they will.

LARGE SQUAD OUT AT BOSTON COLLEGE

The first call for candidates for the Boston College football squad brought out a large number of new candidates, among them many stars of last years interscholastic leagues.

The eleven that will represent the college on the gridiron this Fall will be the finest in years, as all of last year's stars are back in school, with the exception of Pierce and Doyle, who were lost by graduation.

George J. Leonard, '11, of Revere, the first assistant manager of last year, was elected manager for this season and has a number of games on his schedule.

The candidates for the Boston College High School team will report for the first time on Thursday. All of last year's team are back and Manager Leonhan hopes to beat last season's record, when his team met with only two defeats.

HORSE NOTES and SPEEDWAY

It would have been just as well to put those Worcester games off for a day on account of "Granty's" funeral.

The funeral of "Granty" will be held to-day from the late residence, 24 Cope street, Providence, at 1 P. M. There will be a number go down from Boston this morning to pay the last sad honor for the famous turfman.

Gallagher, 2:03¾, the Boston pacer, starts in the $1000 free-for-all at Fall River, Vt., on Friday of this week. It looks as if he should capture a race easy enough. His start next week will be at Cotuit.

* * *

The special race for the matinee trotters and pacers arranged by Justin Edwards for the Prohibition Park, Septembe 20-21 will secure a good entry. A number of the "Mets" have been given a mark including Edwin S., 2:08, who is right good just now.

* * *

Do you think that Native Belle has a chance against Colorado Ex? It may prove a far closer race than it looks on paper. With $35,000 recently bid for the mare, it does not seem as if Tommy Murphy would start to-day unless the daughter of Moko was cherry ripe again.

* * *

Do you think that Walter Cox will succeed in getting Brushkan Bangtoun into winter quarters with that same old mark of 2:24½? Some of the boys figure it out that way.

* * *

James I. Brooks and Harry W. Litchfield of the Fellsway Driving Club are enjoying an automobile trip through the White Mountains. It is a good wager that they arrange some kind of a horse race before they return. Fred Sanborn thinks the boys should have driven through the mountain country and challenged all comers with their hitch.

* * *

The bell rings again down at Newburyport Fair and there should be some right good sport. The old fashioned city always has some lively racing and while nothing has been heard of their entry list, it is a good wager they will uncover a lot of lively steppers before they ring down the curtain.

* * *

Fred W. Furbush and D. V. Sutherland, who have been ill with typhoid fever are better. Fred was able to see a few of his friends on Sunday.

* * *

Fred Kidredge, the clever reinsman of the Dorchester Gentlemen's Driving Club, is getting along famously with Gallagher, 2:03¾. And will drive him as usual at Fall River, Th. this week.

STRAIGHT TIPS

FOR SPORT FANS

THE RED SOX PLAY THEIR LAST home game of the season to-day. Early this evening they mitt the best baseball town in the country a fare-thee-well. The next that Boston fans see of Donovan's men, they'll be out after a pennant other than that copped by the Mack bunch. Although we won't see the Sox in action again this year—unless we spend a few beans in travelling to New York or one of the other burgs—we're all hoping that they finish in second place. Going out on their train with the Highlanders tonight, the Sox players leave behind the greatest and most loyal band of rooters that ever stood by a team.

A BEAK OLD IRISH LADY, WHOSE hair long ago turned to silver, has certainly made a bit with me. She's the mother of a large family of grown-ups, and lives in the West. Writing to a friend of mine—he's her son-in-law—she told him that she had attended two extra masses one Sunday recently because it was raining when the first mass was over and she did not care to brave the storm. She concluded her letter with the exclamation, "Wasn't that going some?" Maybe those boys who gather around the dinner table at her home don't spring a line of slang. And maybe this lovable lady isn't as bright and observing as she was when I was but a mere kid. I'd be licked to death if I could sit by her side when the Athletics and Cubs battle for the world's title. I've never seen her, but I'll bet she'd be the best fan in the crowd.

Straight Tips: You're a wise guy, you are. A few days ago I asked you a question as to whether Jim Jeffries was dead or alive and you had him in reply that "Jack Johnson was calling shakem three times a day." That is a good feller, and the next time I want it to him is mine. Then you was given another chance, Jim Jeffries is dead. If he isn't right, you can bet your life on that. I dare you to publish this. Sr., Albany, N. H. YOURS FOR JEFF.

Thanks for that wise guy stuff. No, old scout, I wouldn't bet my life Jeff can come back. I want to live a little while longer. Spend the rest of your days in St. Albans, but never, NEVER wander to a big city. They send the dippy ones to the bug house here when they catch them in a big burg.

FLOORED 8 TIMES IN FINAL ROUND

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 13.—Tommy Coleman had all the better of the six-round bout with Joe Alberts at the Lehigh A. C. From the start Alberts was outclassed, as his opponent danced around him, and stiff jab which bothered Alberts. Coleman was clever defensively, and he was the ring and take what was coming to him. The end of the fight found the game Alberts still groggy from a hard right swing, landed often on Joe's jaw, sending him to the mat not less than eight times in the final round.

LENNY NEARLY OUT.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 13.—Patsy Kline of Newark easily outpointed Kid Lenny of this city in a six-round contest before the Armory A. C. in the second Kline sent Lenny to the count for the count of nine. Twice more during this round Lenny was put down.

QUILL-LOUGHREY BATTLE TONIGHT

Tommy Quill of Brockton and Young Loughrey of Philadelphia battle for the seventh time at the Armory A. A. to-night. Quill was not satisfied with his showing in the recent bout, and Loughrey and the Brockton youth will weigh in at 6 p. m. to-day at 145 pounds. Quill states that he will not be the one to ask for a return match in some other city, as according to his dope Loughrey will be the loser.

There will be three six-round preliminaries: Young McGovern of Providence vs. Young Baxter of Framingham, Joe White of South Boston, vs. Young Nadeau of Windham and Joe Geary of Roxbury vs. George Perry of the West End. The first preliminary will be called at 8.

Straight Tips: I understand the Sullivan Twins still think their brother Dan is some boxer, but I disagree with them. I have a boy who has seen him box in the Armory, and he tells me that Dan is a joke. Dan is a boxer in a Punch Cushion, and that is about all. We would like to hear from the Sullivan family. METS SHOW ON COLUMBUS DAY

The executive committee of the Autumn horse show of the Metropolitan Driving Club, comprising Messrs. Edgar Power, A. W. Davis and R. A. Fuller, has decided to hold the exhibition in the open air show ring at the Charles River Speedway, Allston, Columbus Day, October 12.

Plans are under way which the committee feels assured will make this "Mets" show even better than any of its predecessors and many novel features are promised.

Superintendent Gilman of the Charles River Reservation has made many improvements, including a handsome driveway about the show ring, and following the Brockton horse show, as it does, the "Mets" committee is already assured of an exceptional entry.

There will be an added attraction a number of races for nacks and galloways among the day, with a purse race added. R. A. Fuller of No. 178 Devonshire street will continue as secretary of the "Mets" horse show, a position which he has very ably filled in the past.

CAPTAIN CORNELL TO RETURN TO EXETER

EXETER, N. H., Sept. 13.—Thomas H. Cornell, the academy's football captain elect, will return to Exeter for another year. He withdrew from the academy late in June and placed himself under a tutor at New Haven in the hope of entering Yale this Fall.

It is not yet definitely known what former players will return to Exeter, but with Captain Cornell, if in condition, Mitchell, Faulkner, O'Brien, Holbrook, and possibly others, there will be a strong, veteran nucleus.

STAR ATHLETE ILL

Jack Cody, the old Cambridgeport gym all-round athlete, who for four years has been on the Newton Y. M. C. A. track team, is dangerously ill at his home in Newton. He became ill shortly before the A. A. U. all-round championships in Chicago, for which reason he could not compete.

HOLY CROSS SQUAD STARTS PRACTICE

WORCESTER, Sept. 13.—Coach Timothy F. Larkin had twenty-four candidates out for the first football practice of the season for the Holy Cross eleven. The outlook for a fast team is excellent. Fully half of the candidates have had experience here and for either the end or halfback positions.

BOSTON AMERICAN'S DOUBLE

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Drawn by Nell Brinkley as a Peasant Girl

Girl Artist Says: "My Cat Was a Princess in the Fourteenth Century"—"The Hobble Skirt Is Artistic, but Women with Large Feet Should Not Attempt It"—"If There Were Only Women in the World, the Ugliest Fashions Would Prevail"

SINCE Ella Wheeler Wilcox declared, a few days ago, that she was the reincarnation of a French peasant girl admired by Cardinal Richelieu and a leader of thought in the time of Louis XIII., theosophists all over the country, artists, writers, and many others have been discussing what personages they were in times gone by.

Nell Brinkley has drawn her idea of what she thinks Ella Wheeler Wilcox must have looked like when she had achieved her greatest prominence in the Paris of Louis XIII., at the time she was holding her salon, attended by all the foremost men and women of fashion and intellect in the French capital.

Miss Brinkley tells what she thinks of the much discussed "hobble"—and the other things.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX AS A PEASANT GIRL.

In her remarkable interview published in the BOSTON AMERICAN Mrs. Wilcox said:

"I know that I have lived before and I know what that life was. I was then a peasant girl, but I had beauty and brains. I achieved fame in Paris and I had my salon in the time of Louis XIII."

Believes in Hobble Skirt.

"I believe in the hobble skirt—while it's in fashion.

"I'd like to believe in reincarnation, because it's artistic and picturesque—and I think it would be lots of fun.

This is the creed and the almost-creed of Nell Brinkley, depicter and cartoonist of women, and the loving creator of the pictures of the little kids.

By the way, Miss Brinkley admits that she cannot draw men—she knows it and wishes her known and unknown critics to become aware of the fact that she is conscious of her limitations in this respect.

When asked per opinion of hobble skirts and reincarnation Miss Brinkley inquired, "What is it all about?"

She is a seeker after knowledge and wanted to know before she gave any opinion on these two very directly and very important subjects, what it was all about. She admitted that both were of great interest to women, as it is women who wear the hobble skirts and who are the chief believers in reincarnation. She thought the subjects interesting to men only as they were reflected by the attitude of some particular woman to whom the men were interested.

Intends Buying One

"It sounds like a 'silly season' discussion," remarked Miss Brinkley, but when informed that it all grew out of an editorial on the hobble skirt of "the greatest living poetess of to-day," she was interested at once. She knows that the editorial writer has many opinions on women's clothes and women's fashions. She has often remarked that the more ultra a fashion the more the editorial writer railed at it in his column, considering it abstractedly, but that he admired the specific and concrete instances of the fashion in geometrical ratio to his raillery.

Returning to the hobble skirt, Miss Brinkley is decidedly in favor of it.

"I do not possess a hobble skirt at the present time—have been too busy to secure one—but let them stay in fashion just a little bit longer, and I will be walking or hobbling around inside of one of them," she stated.

"Of a graceful woman—not blessed with too great an amount of flesh—the hobble skirt is artistic. All the girls can wear them—but a woman with large feet should not attempt one.

"Men may rail at them, but they like the girls in them just the same. In fact, men have a way of railing at women's fashions, but go on liking the girls just the same.

Dress to Please Men

"And the real reason the girls wear the hobble skirt is because they make a hit with men in them. Women always dress to please men. It amazes me to hear the statement made that women dress to please other women, and that men never know whether a girl has on a fashionable gown or not. If there were only women in the world, the simplest and ugliest fashions would prevail. Women always dress to please men, and womenfolk are attempting new effects in dress with some man in view.

"The fact that women will attentively observe a stylish woman shows that she is ever on the lookout for effects, and her starting after other women is done to see how they obtain effects—always with the intention of applying the same methods to herself for the delectation of some new man.

Reincarnation is an Eastern creed. Miss Brinkley is from the West, and, in sooth, Western as all her views and likes—she admits she knows little of it.

"Reincarnation, if one could believe in it, would be lots of fun," said the little Western artist.

"I'd like to believe that I lived in another age. But what a terrible time I would have in picking out the one to be in—me and just what period and country I lived in. I wish I could have lived in ancient Greece, ancient Egypt, in mediæval times—in fact, in all the centuries. I don't reckon I could be satisfied with just one period and one age if I had faith in the belief. And then, if I did remember all those former existences, I would have regret that I could not choose another place and time than the one I had.

"There is only one thing that makes me think there is really something in reincarnation—or its kindred doctrine of transmigration of souls—and that one thing is the name.

"I call her Bettina, but her real name should be some aristocratic sounding one, with the title of Princess or High Mightiness before it. I think she lived before as some princess of the fourteenth century. A remnant of her former royal blood shows in the incomparable, exquisite coolness of her bearing—her style—the unwinking, embarrassing length of her regard—and in her treatment of the people she deigns to live with.

"Just in the same way as some of those mysterious Italian princesses used to pick out a slave or two to lavish a wealth of love and regard on, so Bettina favors one or two of us. I have the good fortune to be one of those same, when she isn't haughtily doing something else. Everybody else she eyes solemnly, contemptuously and amusedly."

Just this same minute that same Bettina was haughtily and furiously trying to open a library table drawer, and with one forgiven thread into it was digging out a mass of letters.

"The only firm believer in reincarnation I have known," continued Miss Brinkley, after she ejected the drawer slider to allow Princess Bettina to get into it, "was Frances Wayne, a fascinating, dear red-haired lady I knew out West. She was an accomplished cyclist with a witty, sharp little tongue and a brilliancy of mind and topaz eyes that matched her gorgeous hair.

She took great personal delight and enjoyment in her belief. She got her idea of reincarnation from a dream she dreamed. In it she was a Roman empress, riding in a triumphal march, when some old Roman emperor came home from the wars, leading his prisoners in chains, and showing the treasure he won. She found all her relatives there, and one of them was a slave driver.

Handy Safety Valve

"She had a genial habit of placing the people she objected to in different roles in that time—and took her spite out on them, thinking how she had treated them in former times.

"And this seems a very handy safety valve for poor feelings in regard to others at various and sundry times.

"This doctrine agreed with Frances Wayne, and it seems to agree with Ella Wheeler Wilcox. I have never met the distinguished poet, but a blase newspaper man told me of an interview with her—a long, long years after she had attained national and international fame. He said she was the most lovely object he had ever met his eyes upon—and so I say that her doctrine must agree with her.

"However, it seems to me that reincarnation would be a handy belief for people who were not doing the right thing in this life. I believe before a court criminal gets, they could defend themselves on the ground that the impulses they received in their former existences were so evil in a former existence that they could not overcome them."

Besides hobble skirts and reincarnation, Miss Brinkley talked a little about her work. Much as she likes to draw the fullest of Bettyfolk, and well as she can do it, she takes greater delight in depicting the images and expression of little kids. She "likes" to draw girls, but says "loves" to draw the kiddies.

Her desire in life is to "live a little, work a little and learn a whole lot." She is a persistent student and is further read than most girls of her years—which number only a very few over twenty. She wants to continue to improve in her drawing, and to attain that end is ever striving after new effects and is never satisfied with her attainments.

She is of a happy, sunny temperament, and impresses one as being more like one of the little "kiddies" she "loves" to draw than a grown-up woman.

Woman's Conscience

By Dorothy Dix

Why a Woman Who Would Make the Most Honest Cashier, Never Thinking of Stealing, Will Smuggle, Cheat at Bridge and Steal Another Woman's Husband

This is the first article of a series on Woman's Conscience, by Dorothy Dix. In this series the queer phases of Woman's Conscience will be contrasted. It will be shown that while she makes the most honest cashier in the world, never thinking of stealing money, she will smuggle, steal souvenirs from hotels, restaurants and other places, cheat at bridge, and thinks nothing of stealing another woman's husband.

Women have lied as to when and wh ere Jewels were purchased, swearing a string of pearls just purchased in Paris was a family heirloom.

THE eighth wonder of the world is woman's conscience.

Anatomists have dissected for us a woman's heart. Psychologists have analyzed the secret motives that animate it; romancers and poets have bared its thrills and palpitations to our gaze, but nobody has ever been reckless enough to even attempt to explore a woman's conscience, and set forth how it works, its wonders to perform.

It is a thing of contradiction—of weakness and strength, of narrowness and limitless width, of rigidity and immeasurable flexibility, and no human being—possibly not even the owner thereof—knows which phase of its character it is going to exhibit or on which tack it is going off on any particular occasion.

The contemplation of the vagaries of the marvelous feminine conscience is particularly edifying at this season when every returning steamship is loaded down with noble Christian women who are returning home, engaged in the pious act of trying to smuggle dutiable goods. Already we have had not less than a dozen cases where women of large wealth and high social standing, women of education and refinement, have been caught redhanded with costly jewels and costly laces concealed about their persons, and fine gowns and furs hidden in their trunks under false bottoms.

When confronted with their loot these women have rattled and deliberated as to when and where the articles were purchased, swearing that a string of brand new pearls was a family heirloom; that a bold bag with the stamp of a shop in the Rue de la Paix on it was purchased on Boylston street, and that a gown that was the last cry of Paris was an old rag that had been taken abroad by its owner.

Now, look you, these women are not poor little shopkeepers, tempted beyond endurance to make a dishonest penny by doing a little smuggling. They are, in almost every case, women of wealth, amply able to indulge themselves in the luxury of a clean conscience as well as a new diamond dog collar. Moreover, they are women of otherwise impeccable character, honored and respected in the communities in which they live.

Ordinarily they do not steal, nor lie, nor cheat. You might leave your pocketbook with perfect impunity on such a woman's dressing table. You would be safe in believing anything that she told you as a matter of fact, and if you had any business dealing with her she would not perfectly squarely with you.

How, then, can you explain the fact that a conscientious woman's conscience doesn't turn a hair when she deals with Uncle Sam at the Custom House? How can she, without a single moral qualm, sign a declaration that is an affidavit that she has brought in nothing dutiable when she knows that she has thousands of dollars' worth of stuff hidden away in the lining of her clothes?

How can a mother, who has children that she desires to be honest, sweetly and innocently look an inspector in the eye and assure him that she never even heard of the pearls concerning which he is questioning her when all the time the pearls are sewn in the brim of her hat?

What figure must a woman cut in the eyes of her children when she lies about jewels they know are concealed in her hat?

How Can She Do It?

By what peculiar freak of memory is the woman who is a pillar in the church and a shining example of the moralities enabled to comfortably forget half the things that she bought abroad until they are recalled to her memory by the customs officers finding them in her baggage? Nobody can explain these things, for the curious part of the phenomenon is not that women try to smuggle, but that they are enabled to do so without in the slightest degree doing injury to their consciences, for if by some peculiar involution of logic the feminine mind did not condone smuggling women would not do it.

If a woman felt herself degraded by stealing from the Government as she would if she stole from a neighbor; if she felt herself perjured by making a false declaration as to her purchases in Paris as she would if she swore to any other lie, will heaven couldn't drag her to do it. So as far as her relations with the Government are concerned, woman's conscience has an astigmatism that renders it totally blind, and incapable of seeing right from wrong, or honesty from dishonesty.

The Way They See It.

Of course, if all women who attempt to get dutiable goods past the Custom House without paying, were militant suffragettes, they might justify their smuggling on the ground that inasmuch as the government denies them citizenship, and they are taxed without representation, and have no voice in levying high protective duties, they have a right to circumvent the law if they can.

But, as a matter of fact, the fair smugglers are not suffragists. They are rich Antis, who hold that women should have no voice in governments, and they don't base their determination not to pay import duties on high moral ground. They simply smuggle because they want to save money, and because they see nothing wrong, nor dishonest, nor disgraceful in trying to cheat such an impersonal old gentleman as Uncle Sam. If it was the next door, now, they wouldn't dream of robbing him of a single penny.

So peculiarly is the feminine conscience constructed.

As for explanation of why a woman who in other respects is perfectly honest and truthful will lie and cheat for the sake of getting in a few dollars' worth of clothes without paying duty on them, there is none. The fact merely exists.

Those 185 Foolish Letters

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

ROSCOE SANBORN, whom by wife describes as a "fascinator," won the brief affection of 185 women.

He is the sort of man who makes love to every woman he meets, and, though I regret to say it of my own sex, there are many women who are only too ready to place faith in the flimsiest of love making. He is the sort of man who could make 185 women love him for a little while, but could not win the lasting love of one woman.

He was a man who traveled a great deal, and he made love to every girl he met. To the girls in small towns a stranger is always interesting, especially if he comes from a large city.

His wife justifies her own faith in him by making much of his attentiveness. That is natural; any woman would be anxious to explain her love for a bad man. Of course he was attentive; for the time being she was the woman he cared for most and he made every effort to please her.

Any man is attentive to the woman he is trying to please.

One hundred and eighty-five women have written foolish or compromising letters to an unscrupulous man. I hope that ten times 185 girls will learn a lesson from this, and refrain from writing silly, foolish letters to men.

The curious are that every one of the 185 girls and women took Sanborn on his word—precaution.

Knowing almost nothing about him, they accepted his attentions and, according to many of the letters, permitted his foreknowledge.

Don't imagine you love a man simply because you are sure you could live happily with him.

Wait until you are quite sure that you can't live happily without him, and then it will be time enough to think you are in love.

When a Man Loves

And how are are you going to be sure that he is in love with you?

When he is really in love he will ask you to marry him, and he will want your parents' consent, as well as yours, so as to make it more binding. Until then don't place much faith in his protestations.

Do you know an old song which goes like this. The man sings:

"I will give you the keys to heaven. I will give you the keys to heaven.

Madame, will you walk; madame, will you talk?

Madame, will you walk and talk with me?"

And the lady answers:

"Though you give me the keys to heaven, though you give me the keys to heaven.

No, I will not walk, no, I will not talk, No, I will not walk and talk with thee."

And then he goes on and offers her in turn a grand piano, a motor car, and several other wonderful things, but still she answers prudently, "No I will not walk nor talk with thee." Finally he sings:

"I will give you the keys in my heart, and we shall be married till death us do part!

Madame, will you walk; madame, will you talk?

Madame, will you walk and talk with me?"

That is quite a different matter, you see, and now she feels simply dumbfounded.

"You shall give me the keys to your heart, And we shall be married till death us do part."

Yes, I will walk; yes, I will talk;
Yes, I will walk and talk with thee."

Don't think for a moment that I advise girls to look upon every man they meet as a possible husband.

A girl may enjoy a good friendship with a man without a thought of love on either side. And every girl has several harmless little love affairs ere she meets the right man.

There are plenty of men of the Roscoe Sanborn type traveling about.

Beware of them; don't accept their worthless attentions, and don't be foolish enough to write to them.

The way to detect one of the type is by not accepting his attentions until you find out something about him, who he is, etc. After you have found out you won't ever want to see him again.

We Will Prove at Our Own Expense That It Is No Longer Necessary to Be Thin, Scrawny, and Undeveloped.

"Gee! Look at that pair of skinny Scarecrows! Why don't they Sargol."

This is a generous offer to every thin man or woman in Boston and vicinity. We positively guarantee to increase your weight to your own satisfaction or no pay. Thin also over-weight, as what it means. At our own risk we offer to put 10, 15, yes, 30 pounds of good, solid, healthy flesh on your body. We fill out hollows in cheeks and neck, and give that plump, rounded look, to accentuate and reveal the beauty of your whole form until it implies well rounded energy to do this without drastic diet, "exercise," severe physical culture, or any other unpleasant method. Our records show that thousands of people have put on pounds of solid flesh in a few weeks' time, and have kept it there for months and months afterward.

We could not publish this offer in the columns of the paper if we were not prepared to do it. It is only the astounding results of our Sargol that have enabled us to make such an offer. Sargol is a guarantee compound and is not a secret patent medicine, as you can tell by its name. Sargol is a scientific, tissue-building agent, which, when introduced into the blood, strengthens the nerves and puts the digestive tract into such shape that your food is assimilated and turned into good, solid, healthy flesh instead of passing through the system undigested and unassimilated. It is a thoroughly scientific principle, this Sargol, and is helping thousands of ladies and gentlemen to a better figure. Take it all and certainly be much pleasanter in appearance. GOODBY ROSAMOND. GOODBY! I GO TO DO HAND TO HAND BATTLE WITH DESMOND!
CURSES! MY LAST CARTRIDGE AND I HOPE IT PLUGS THAT COP!
YOU HERE, CLAUDE ECLAIRE! I DEFY YOU, YOU BIG BOOB!
DEFEND YOURSELF, DESMOND, WE WILL FIGHT WITH NATURE'S OWN WEAPONS
I'LL NEVER BE TAKEN ALIVE! HA, HA, HA!

THIS IS MY ANSWER, CLAUDE ECLAIRE! NOW TO KIDNAP ROSAMOND
SOLID STEEL
O!

What? Shall that cur Desmond be allowed to live just because there is no ammunition to be had? Never! Not while Claude Eclaire's good right arm retains its strength!

But there is no hurry. There is plenty of time to bid the fair Rosamond a long, lingering farewell. Who knows? He may never see her again. But don't make any bets on it.

If Desmond only knew that our hero was so close at hand, he wouldn't waste his last bullet on the cop. He might stand a show of hitting Claude at that distance, but he'll never get the cop.

This is going to be one peach of a scrap. Get on to the muscles on Claude. He's there with the punch, all right. Here's where Desmond takes the count. Go to him, Claude; go to him.

Aha! The coward beats it! He knows he's outclassed. But where will he go? There's no airship in sight, and Claude will get him at the top of the tower, and he'll get him good.

Oh, fudge! We thought this fight was going to be on the level. But we might have known that Desmond would pull some dirty work. It looks like 23 for Claude, but you never can tell what the next pictures will bring forth.

CHAPTER XXIV.—(Continued)

They were harassed in his way and kept from their honest pursuits for ten days, and then finally Doyle started East with the miserable and unfortunate liar.

Three years of this life of cautiousness and care were passed and Lee Randall was now the cashier of the bank and the trusted man of the bank's owners. His business career, in that time, had been full of success. He had made money for himself and money for the bank.

Mr. Lane felt that he had been singularly fortunate in getting Randall into his service, and he also realized that the pardoned convict had made himself worthy of the love and the future of his daughter.

To Rose came the conviction that it was time for Lee Randall to ask her in marriage. They were betrothed, but never ever Jimmy felt that the moment had come to take Rose as his wife, the figure of Doyle would loom up in his mind. A black shadow would fall between them. Time and again he assured himself that he was safe at last, and it would be all right to announce the date for the wedding, but as often he would ponder the picture of a home where his children would be, where happiness had its seat and center for him and Rose, and then the coming of the Central Office man.

A trial in court, resulting in an acquittal, would be bad enough, for his old life would be laid bare and shame and disgrace would come to his wife and the little ones. It was enough to make him pause, and enough to make eternally miserable a man less strong and less capable than Jimmy.

"I know what is worrying you, Lee, Rose told him one evening, as they walked in her garden, "but I am not afraid. I could never feel ashamed of you."

"If you could, dear," he replied, "but I don't want you to carry any of that burden, if it is placed on me."

"But half of your sorrows, as well as half of your joys, are mine," she said. "It shall be our duty to divide fairly. The marriage law compels us to do that."

After such arguments Jimmy would go to his desk and pull out the material with which he had so carefully built his alibi. This work would have to stand between him and prison. It might even prevent his arrest and trial. If it should convince Doyle on the day of his coming that he had made a mistake, Jimmy would be forever freed from him.

He hoped and prayed that his alibi would prove successful, and, as he worked, he steeled himself for the time when he would face his enemy and try to convince him that he was wrong. Sometimes he got a savage joy out of the thought that he would fool this human bloodhound.

In confident moments he told himself that he could make Doyle believe that he had barked up the wrong tree, and would get revenge on him by threatening him with criminal libel.

CHAPTER XXV.

AFTER a long and earnest talk with Rose's father, in which he confided all his fears and hopes to him, Jimmy asked that the marriage day be set. The announcement of the engagement was formally made, and Rose set about getting her trousseau.

Until the two young children, Kitty and Bobby, were through school and ready for preparatory college work, Jimmy and his wife would live in the Lane mansion.

They were happy days for the lovers. Rose would stop by the bank every day for a word or two with the man she loved. The children, too, looked upon him as already a member of the family, and they would romp into his office on their way home from school, and Bobby would frequently demand to be taught how to become a banker. The little chap was the idol of his father's heart, a bright, manly, healthy youngster, and the only son. If aught ever happened to him, Jimmy often thought, Mr. Lane's heart would be broken.

One of the things that most interested the two youngsters at this time was the new vault that was being finished for the bank. They spent all their spare time studying it and watching the men at work. It was to be the most perfect work of up-to-date mechanical genius, a vault that would defy the most skilled of robbers and that would be proof against fire.

Of course, Jimmy was himself interested in its construction, for here would be kept all the money for which he was held responsible. As he aided in the construction of the great money box of steel and cement, he often found himself marveling at the change that a few years had wrought in his life.

Here he was aiming all his own mechanical genius not to undo the work of safe builders, but to increase its value, and to keep out the very gentry of whom he was once a prince.

Jimmy felt sure that here would be a vault that would successfully defy the best efforts of the brainiest of yeggmen, and that, perhaps, even a man with such remarkable instinct and use of touch as he himself possessed would be unable to open it without the combination.

"Could I do it?" he found himself murmuring at times, but he forced the thought from his brain. He knew that once the mania came upon him he would have to fight all over again the fight that he had made so successfully during the years in which he had walked the straight line of honesty and integrity.

No.

It could never come about. Not even for the gratification of this strange desire would he put band to the great tumblers of a vault, save to revolve them according to a written combination. He would not even suffer even the thought of being tempted.

Jimmy talked with the two children about the vault of the great structure and showed them its interesting points, but he did not even trust himself to make a study of the bars and rods that lined the inside of the great steel doors. As the work on the vault neared completion he became thankful that this dreaded ghost of the past had come before him again, and that he had tried his strength with it and had won.

These happy prenuptial days, crowded with the sunshine of Rose's love and his love for her, with the laughter of the little children and the joy of work that brought just reward, passed swiftly.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

HIS PREJUDICE

THERE were introductions all around.

The big man stared in a puzzled way at the club guest. "You look like a man I've seen somewhere, Mr. Blinker," he said. "Your face seems familiar. I face- you have a double. And a funny thing about it is that I remember I formed a strong prejudice against the man who looks like you—although, I'm quite sure, we never met."

The little guest softly laughed. "I'm the man," he answered, "and I know why you formed the prejudice. I passed the contribution plate for two years in the church you attended."

"There's a heap in makin' things, sure enough," remarked Old Man Somarindyk.

"When a feller's learned to know which goes with which, an' how much, he's learned about all he needs to."

"That's right," agreed Washington Hancock. "A bean ain't so much by itself; a lill o' beans ain't considered a right smart. But you take an' roast it in with Rio coffee an' it'll fetch two bits a pound. I'll leave that to Rufe if it won't. That reminds me of Andy Bishop an' Pauline Halliday."

"It don't take a heap to remind you o' suthen," growled Old Man Somarindyk.

Hancock "Disremembered."

"No, it don't," conceded Hancock cheerfully. "You remind me o' suthin' once in a while. Shall I tell you what you remind me of?"

"Go right ahead," said the Old Man, grasping the ferrule of his knotty stick. "Go right ahead. I'm kind o' cur'us to know."

"Well, I disremember jest what it was now," said Hancock, "but as far's Andy's concerned, it don't seem no longer ago than yistiday that he got Pauline right conceity of herself.

"Pauline wasn't no great shakes for beauty. I reckon if you'd seen her an' somebuddy ast your opinion, you'd have said a mud fence put it all over her in the matter of looks. Her eyes was sort o' pigeon-toed, as you might say, an' her nose was a heap more inclined to one side of her face than it was to the other; her mouth was suthin' like a bad weather check in the side of a barn, an' she had red hair and freckles the size of a dime.

"Well, when the boys seen Pauline a-comin', they'd go off an' take a drink somewheres. They felt like they needed it. So Pauline, by the time she'd got to mouth. You don't need to tell me they're beautiful.'

"'I hain't a-goin to,' says Andy.

"'Did you come here to insult me?' says Pauline, stiffenin' up.

"'Not by no means,' says Andy. 'You take a pile o' sticks an' they ain't specially beautiful, but you kin set 'em together so they will be. You take the paint on my work pants an' it don't look good becus the colors is set just the way I happen to wipe my hands or splatter off'n the brush; but you take them colors an' you set 'em right an' you kin make the prettiest kine of a picture. You take four naughts an' a figger five an' a figger two an' a dollar mark an' set 'em down an' they ain't interestin' less'n you put the dollar mark first an' the rest the way they ought to go —The p'int is that things has to be arranged right an', while your nose, when you take it by itself, ain't no center table ornament, it goes first rate with your mouth an' your eyes an' vice versa an' versa vice. It's the arrangement of the hull thing that counts, an' when it comes to that, if anybody says there's another face like yours in fifty miles around, he's got me to fight, that's all.'

"Well, Pauline was plum tickled to death. But she says, 'I didn't quite understand them figgers, Andy.'

"'Your figger is all right,' says Andy. 'Come to think of it, it was your figger first struck me.'"

Advice to a Dressmaker

By WINIFRED BLACK

Dear Miss Black—I want to ask your advice, and hope you will be kind enough to give it to me through the American, which paper I am a constant reader of.

I am a dressmaker, and find competition so great in New York and living expenses so high that it is impossible to save anything, and barely possible to meet expenses.

Now, what I want you to tell me is this: Do you think I could succeed in some small town, and name one if possible?

I can cut and fit perfectly and am a very good designer, with original ideas.

LONE WOMAN.

DEAR Lone Woman:

Don't you worry a minute—any one with as much common sense as you must have to write that letter has not one place, but a dozen waiting for her in the great busy, happy, successful world.

Take the first Sunday you have to yourself, go without your luncheon and make your carfare that way.

Wear a pair of old shoes for a week after they belong in the refuse pile; turn the velvet on your last Fall hat, and don't put a glove on your hand for a month—do anything honest on earth to get money enough to take a few trolley trips to the small towns all around New York.

You'll find postmistresses in a lot of these little towns and women keeping little stores. Find out from them the name of the president of the Ladies' Aid Society or the Young Women's Christian Endeavor. Go and see her and talk dressmaking. Tell her you'll do her work for a smaller order than usual just to get a start. Turn her out a well-made, well-fitting frock; get it to her on the day you promised it, and maybe an hour or so before she expected it, and you'll have so much work to do in that town that you won't have time to remember that you ever even hesitated about going there.

Get out of New York—get out of it if you have to walk and carry your clothes on a stick over your shoulder.

The small town, the middle sized thriving village, is the place for you —a for women like you.

You'll get plenty of work, and you'll make friends, too—real friends; not 'just the woman in the next flat or the people who happen to room on the same floor as your hall bedroom. Get out of New York —into America.

Into the country, where an honest woman who supports herself honestly is honestly respected by the people for whom she works.

Put on your hat' don't waste another minute. Put on your hat and hike.

May happiness and good luck attend you.

TECHNICALLY GENTLEMEN

THERE is only one strictly technical definition of gentleman—a man entitled to bear coat armor. In the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries it was used with this significance, and the second-hand looked-at hunter will occasionally find So-and-so, "gentleman," written on dusty and stained pedigrees. But this definition has dropped out, for now any one may use arms who chooses to pay an arms license. The inland revenue takes your guinea or two guineas without inquiring as to your right to bear arms. And though the Herald's College has the right to grant arms to those who can afford to pay the necessary fees, it cannot prevent people from using arms to which they have no right.—London Chronicle.

Last of Season's Fetes

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT

This is the season of the year when all the world of fashion is on the wing, flitting from seashore to mountain resort or across the seas, for a peep into the fashion shops of Europe and a brief respite from the social demands at home before settling down for the Winter in town.

But the majority of our smart set are either opening their country estates for the Autumn months or coming into town to be on hand early for the long season ahead.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Small Moore and their two children have come on from their fine estate at Lake Forest, Ill., to spend the remainder of September with Mr. Moore's parents, Judge and Mrs. William H. Moore, at "Rockmarge," Pride's Crossing, and October with Mrs. Moore's people, the John McKinleys, who are occupying the log-cabin cottage at Smith's Point, Manchester. The McKinleys will prolong their stay on the North Shore until late in November and will continue to entertain large numbers of house guests, as they have been doing all Summer.

The Gardner M. Lanes have returned from their Summer in Maine and are now at their Manchester estate, where they will remain until very late in the Autumn.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Bradley and their charming daughter, Miss Leslie Bradley are Mrs. Washington B. Thomas with her daughter, Miss Margaret Thomas, are among those just arriving on the other side. They will return after a few weeks of shopping and sight-seeing and the Thomases, who spent last Winter in New York will come

The Bradleys, who have been occupying their handsome country place, Sunset Hill, at Bernardsville, N. J., for the Autumn months, are to remain until the first of October. Their son and daughter-in-law who have been occupying the Higginson bungalow this season, have gone to their Lincoln estate for the Autumn.

The H. Mortimer Brookes, who have been such important factors in the social life of the North Shore, have left the G. M. Lane villa at Manchester, which they have been occupying and have gone to their Newport estate to remain several weeks prior to returning to New York.

Miss Fanny P. Mason is closing her Beverly Cove cottage the 15th and will be at her Walpole, N. H., estate until late in the season.

The Edward D. Brandegees, who returned several days ago from a fortnight's cruise on board the Charles Robinson yacht, the "Dream Isle," are now encamped in the Adirondacks, though, on account of the children, they are keeping their house at Wareham open until the 20th of the month.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

The election in Maine is looked upon as an argument for higher prices.

$ $ $

Even the Republicans in State Street are Democrats this year—for stock market purposes. The Roosevelt tour has had a great influence on the stock market, and the State Street point of view is that every Democratic victory is a move for higher prices in stocks. It must be understood, however, that this is the strictly stock market point of view of the situation. The crop of politics this year is as important as the crop of wheat.

$ $ $

Determined efforts to increase the crop of wheat are to be made, according to addresses at a convention of wheat growers in the State. Now that the public chance against railroads has practically stopped, railroad development, capital is to be invited into the development of farms with the idea of increasing the yield per acre.

$ $ $

In view of the action of small Western banks in forcing the farmers to market their wheat with unfair haste, the statement of Comptroller of the Currency Murray is considered very important. Mr. Murray says there are more than 2,000 national banks without proper vaults and bar-bars, and he has invited many bank officers to resign. It is well known that the banking statutes have been flagrantly violated. It is significant that Mr. Murray has the complete sympathy and cooperation of the leading banks in New York.

$ $ $

Two strong notes reflecting prosperity in the high record price for stock of the National Railways of Mexico. This is due to the immense crops being harvested in the republic. Railroad development, also, has been abnormally successful. The other is in Long Island Railroad stock. The lease is destined to be one of the great investment pieces of the country. Long Island stock will be particularly valuable should the Pennsylvania company get a contract to build new subways in New York city, as it is reported is planning to do. The new Pennsylvania terminal on Manhattan Island cannot prove its value until better connections can be made with local Manhattan lines.

$ $ $

The Phelps Dodge crowd is one of the strongest in America, and the announcement that a great many speculators have been required by strong banks to sell the Rock Island stock is gradually acquiring color for reason of the enormous crops that have become entangled in it year after year. The system has great value. It is grotesquely overcapitalized, and when it has finally drifted into the absolute control of conservative bonds and when the owners, the common stockholders, get something to say about its management, it may become respectable all in a form for easy reference. It is readily available for collateral or pocket use, and is altogether one of the neatest productions of its kind ever seen.

$ $ $

While any announcement of a coming issue of $15,000,000 or $20,000,000 Swift & Co. bonds at this time would be considered by be accepted as premature, there is hardly a doubt that when the time is considered ripe for the company, they will do some financing.

$ $ $

The Boston Financial News says: "About under $2 per share the stock of the Kerr Lake Mining Co. offers, it would appear, both a good investment and a speculation. The dividend is $2 per year, at which figure it yields over 20 per cent on the investment."

$ $ $

The American Metal Market says: The markets both here and in London are quiet, and there is only a small trade, although sellers are more willing to book orders at once for early deliveries. Thus we know of offers to sell electrolytic for equal monthly deliveries throughout the year at 12½ cents, and lake copper per for the same deliveries can be purchased at 12½. Spot and September copper is obtainable at 10 to 15 points less than this.

$ $ $

Special trains on the Pennsylvania and New York Central lines will carry delegates from New York and the East to the thirty-fifth annual convention of the American Bankers' Association in Los Angeles, Oct. 3 to 7. Each railroad will extend the trip to take in other points of interest.

$ $ $

W. C. Langley & Co. are issuing a series of letters on copper stocks. The first is by Louis D. Ricker, of "no information they say." "We are now convinced that the copper situation will be much better and that a few months will see the industry on a different and more profitable basis, where the laws of legitimate supply and demand will be given the same sane consideration as to the steel industry. We do not expect any great or sudden rise, but a steady increase in values."

"THE COUNTRY BOY."

A romance of a farmer's son, a snowy girl and the girl he left behind, begins next Saturday in the BOSTON AMERICAN.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Rock Island started off with a bound at the opening of the stock market in Wall street today and gained nearly a point in the first few minutes of trading. A supply of the stock appeared at the end of ten minutes, however, and the stock lost almost all that it had gained at the opening.

Prices were irregular and trading moderately active in other leading issues.

The election result in Maine seemed to have little effect on the market, but the Wall Street prediction that sooner or later notice would have to be taken of a disturbing political situation.

Reading was among the few issues that sold off, showing a fractional loss shortly after the opening, which it recovered from later on, selling around 140.

The curb market opened dull and moderately active.

Quotations on stocks in London were dull and showed no important changes.

"THE ARCADIANS" WINS POPULAR FAVOR AT THE COLONIAL

New Musical Play Considered Most Important Since "The Merry Widow."

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

Occasionally you find yourself in the same theatre with a musical play that is not dazzling on the end of a song or clinging for dear life to some interpolated vaudeville nonsense—just occasionally. This occurred to you last evening at the Colonial Theatre as "The Arcadians" passed in review and played itself into solid success without the help of soug and dance artists and acrobatic specialists. "The Arcadians" clinched high upon plain merit and kept on an even course through these acts of sparkling merriment that began in delicious melody and—

—and there's your story—without detail.

It needed no wide stretch of the imagination to find in "The Arcadians" entertaining qualities that have been persistently lacking in a majority of the musical junk that has been rendered for a season or two. Even musical plays that have possessed a real good time have generally stifled it with heart rending "features." There was no such dark work in "The Arcadians"—the germ was burned into healthy development and grew into the best musical play since "The Merry Widow."

Evenly balanced in every particular, with engaging music to relieve the the dull moments that might have been conspicuous had they been allowed to drag along, and a web of real humor that has never failed when it was uncorked, there was little wonder that the Colonial packed its first night's audience close and made it the prevailing style in faces. There was nothing to detract from the entertainment or the audience last evening.

One of the Real Delights.

It didn't take more than a glance to convince you that Frank Moulan is the real one of the real delights of the evening and with "Sky Master" he sang himself into success that threatened to break up the performance. You never wearied of Mr. Knight.

Frank Moulan, Ethel Cadman's pieces cheerily combined to fast work, gave a satisfactory account of themselves. Behind long in Arcadia's well of truth and Georgian with a splendidly lubricated joints.

The Summer's real fun and recognition simple dimensions of Miss Connie Ediss, whose Mrs. Smith made a decided hit and made the most of her affection. As Mr. Lindsay, one of the cast she held her own with gleeful ease.

Sang of Sweet Arcadia.

Julia Sanderson danced herself into favor and scored readily with legs and voice. Her "Charming Weather," which she sang with Alan Mudie, and "Bring Me a Rose," which she handled alone.

The vocal pride of "The Arcadians" was Miss Ethel Cadman, who drew all of the high notes. Miss Cadman was the owner of melody and sang it with a high soprano. The composer gave her much the best of it in songs.

"The Arcadians" will supply a restfulness that you never believed could be discovered in a musical play.

HACKNEYED "FEATURES" ARE CAST ASIDE IN THE LATEST SUCCESS.

the entertainment something to be remembered. The bill will be changed on Thursday.

Park Theatre.

"The Climax" began another week at the Park Theatre last evening. This interesting play of New York life is proving one of the most popular attractions of the early season.

Columbia Theatre.

"The Merry Maidens" were all to the merry at the Columbia Theatre last evening, when they began a week's engagement. The company was made up of talented singers, live comedians and a score of pretty young women.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

Lawrence and Wright were features in the new program at the Bowdoin Square Theatre yesterday. Other vaudeville numbers and motion pictures completed the bill.

Scenic Temple.

A new programme of motion pictures and high-class vaudeville was presented at the Scenic Temple yesterday. Many novel features were presented and an incidental concert was given by Howe's Orchestra.

Norumbega Park.

The new program for this week at Norumbega Park included six high-class vaudeville features, and was headed by the Tremont quartette. As the Autumn colors spread over the trees and foliage at Norumbega the grounds take on their most beautiful dress. There is no better month in the year at Norumbega Park than September.

Next Week's Shows.

Douglas Fairbanks will come to the Globe next week in a new play called "The Cub."

"The Bells of Haslemere" will be the attraction at the Castle Square Theatre next week.

"Love Among the Lions" is announced as the attraction at the Hollis Street Theatre next week.

"The Forest Hunter" will come to the Tremont Theatre next Monday.

Fritzi Scheff in "The Mikado" will begin a two weeks' engagement at the Shubert next Monday.

Thomas A. Wise, in "A Gentleman from Mississippi," will come to the Majestic next week.

"Polly of the Circus" will be the next attraction at the Grand Opera House.

TAFT IS HOST AT LUNCHEON

BEVERLY, Sept. 13.—President Taft and John Hays Hammond visited the Myopia Hunt Club to-day and played several rounds of golf. A number of friends followed the players around the course.

This afternoon the President and Mrs. Taft entertain at luncheon at the Taft cottage. Bishop Lawrence, Baron Rosen, Russian Ambassador; Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Ames, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Higginson, Mrs. Guy Norman, Secretary of the Navy George von L. Meyer and Captain Archibald Butt, military side to the President.

TWO AERONAUTS ARE NEAR CRASH IN A FOG

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Joe Seymour, in a Curtiss biplane and Tod Schriever, also in a biplane, became lost in the fog to-day while flying over the aviation field at Garden City, L. I. The men were in great danger of a collision and could only keep track of each other by listening for the motor explosions. Both kept high in the air until the fog lifted before attempting to descend. Neither was injured.

SCHOOL COST JUMPS $70,373

The cost of maintaining the Boston schools has increased $70,373.59 more the first eight months of the fiscal year than for the same period last year, according to Business Agent W. T. Keough.

At a meeting of the School Board, he stated that $2,610,767.84 has already been spent as against $2,539,883,84 last year, and leaving a balance of $1,488,768.03. The principal increase is in instructors' salaries which amount to $17,034.60 more than last year.

The board voted to make the degree or associate of arts (A.A.), given to graduates of the university extension courses offered by Harvard and other colleges, equivalent to the regular AB degree in qualifying as a teacher in Boston high schools.

A petition was also received, asking that one of the new elementary schools to be named in honor of the late George A. Hibbard.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 200,000 more than its next highest competitor and 75,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

A glossary of financial and stock exchange terms and condensed dictionary containing 410 pages has been compiled by Hornblower & Weeks. The booklet, which is handsomely bound in pebble leather, is one of the most valuable contributions issued to the banking house. It includes within its covers the Boston and New York Stock Exchange rules, ticker abbreviations, income and monetary tables and sundry matters frequently sought for, and all in a form for easy reference. It is readily adaptable for either office or pocket use and is altogether one of the neatest productions of its kind ever seen.

The Phelps-Dodge people believed it would be the advantageous of their company to obtain a voice in the Rock Island management, and it is pointed out that it will be the obtaining of a increased tonnage for the Rock Island, as the Phelps-Dodge people will probably favor a line in which their interest is invested, and the Rock Island mining company will benefit from the acquisition of the Calumet & Hecla, as benefit is expected a reverse to Rock Island.

What Do You Read? Why Do You Read It?

How Do You Tell a Good Book from a Bad One?

Copyright, 1910, by American Journal-Examiner

This is the first generation in which the ability TO READ has been practically universal.

To-day the grown man or woman unable to read is a curiosity—an exception—in a civilized community.

When the old man of to-day was young the great exception was the working man or woman THAT COULD READ.

The most important thing in the world is READING.

The knowledge of all the past is open to all human beings of the present.

For hundreds of centuries men have lived on earth merely feeding their BODIES.

For the first time in men's history the race as a whole has begun to feed THE MIND.

As the mind is to the body, so the FOOD of the mind is to the body's food.

Fathers and mothers worry about the reading done by their children. Many grown men and women without intellectual guidance behind them grope among books like a blind man in the dark.

"What shall I read, what should my children read—

"How can a good book be told from a bad book?"

Such questions are asked in almost every home, every day.

Occasionally we have tried to answer this question.

We give to fathers and mothers to-day Southey's directions for testing the character of a book.

Read this brief extract and give it to others to read.

And if you are interested in the extract, go to the public library and get some of Southey's poems and other writings.

He was born about one hundred and thirty-six years ago and died about sixty-seven years ago.

Here is his method of testing a book's character.

To test a book—by Southey:

Would you know whether the tendency of a book is good or evil, examine in what state of min' you lay it down.

Has it induced you to suspect that what you have been accustomed to think unlawful may after all be innocent, and that that may be harmless which you have hitherto been taught to think dangerous?

Has it tended to make you dissatisfied and impatient under the control of others, and disposed you to relax in that self-government without which both the laws of God and man tell us there can be no virtue—and consequently no happiness?

Has it attempted to abate your admiration and reverence for what is great and good, and to diminish in you the love of your country and your fellow creatures?

Has it addressed itself to your pride, your vanity, your selfishness, or any other of your evil propensities?

Has it defiled the imagination with what is loathsome and shocked the heart with what is monstrous?

Has it disturbed the sense of right and wrong which the Creator has implanted in the human soul? If so—if you are conscious of all or any of these effects—or if, having escaped from all, you have felt that such were the effects it was intended to produce, throw the book into the fire, whatever name it may bear on the title page!

Throw it into the fire, young man, though it should have been the gift of a friend! Young lady, away with the whole set, though it should be the prominent furniture of a rosewood bookcase!

The Pope COULD Sell His Pictures if He Chose To

But HE WON'T SELL THEM. The Beautiful Collections of the Vatican Will Remain in Their Most Appropriate Surroundings

Copyright, 1910, by American Journal-Examiner

The highest court of Italy has decided that the Pope, if he chooses, may sell the pictures, statues and other art treasures in the Vatican.

Private individuals in Italy are not allowed to sell the paintings of the old masters—EXCEPT BY PERMISSION OF THE GOVERNMENT.

But the Pope NEEDS no such permission, nor did he need any decision of a court to establish his rights.

The Vatican, St. Peter's and St. John Lateran are the private property of the Papacy—and not only the private property in the ordinary sense, but the actual property under the temporal rule, under the legal power of the Papacy, and of the succession of Popes.

It was foolish to discuss the question as to the Pope's right to sell his own property—for there could be no question as to that right; and in the second place, there is no possibility whatever of the Pope permitting the wonderful art treasures of the Vatican to be dispersed.

Since the question has been raised it is well to recall the work that the Popes have done consistently for the promotion of art. If there is any one thing that the Popes are entitled to it is surely the art collection of the Vatican—FOR THE ART OF THE ENTIRE WORLD OWES TO THE POPES A DEBT THAT CAN NEVER BE PAID AND THAT IS SCARCELY APPRECIATED.

The Catholic Church, and especially the individual Popes, one after the other, have encouraged great artists, helped them financially, and with advice and constant encouragement.

The greatest geniuses, like Michelangelo, and the men of lesser power, but worthy of encouragement, have flourished under the protection of the Popes.

When ignorant semi-barbarism cared nothing for art and would have destroyed its labors, the Popes were the protectors of art and of literature—the world ought to know that.

And some of the ignorant might know also that the Popes were the founders and protectors of the universities—THE SEATS OF LEARNING OF THE WORLD—centuries ago, when other rulers were barbarians, and when only the power of the Popes, commanding special protection and special privileges for students, made study possible.

The Papacy offers freely to the world's inspection the great masterpieces in the galleries of the Vatican—there they will remain, to teach succeeding generations and to inspire respect for the power of genius.

THAT GIRL, THERE, HAS GOT A MILLION DOLLARS IN HER OWN NAME!
WHAT'S HER NAME?
COME ON LITTLE GIRL, LET'S GET MARRIED!
SIR?—
WHY I DON'T EVEN KNOW YOUR NAME!
MY NAME'S NERVO! WE'LL GET ACQUAINTED!
DO YOU TAKE THIS MAN TO BE YOUR LAWFUL HUSBAND?
SURE SHE DOES!—HURRY UP!
JUSTICE OF THE PEACE
NOW THAT WE'RE MARRIED I'LL TAKE CARE OF YOUR MILLION!
WHY I HAVEN'T ANY MILLION!—IT'S MY COUSIN WHO HAS A MILLION!

Education Is the Greatest Thing in the World and School Begins To-morrow

The Aeroplane and Wireless Telegraphy Are the Result of Just Such Education as May Be Obtained in Boston's Public Schools

School begins in Boston to-morrow. More than 103,000 boys and girls will attend or at least have an opportunity to do so. It has been announced by the School Commissioners that every pupil will have a seat.

The boys and girls and the city are to be congratulated upon this fact. Other cities are not so fortunate as Boston in providing ample school room. In New York, for instance, more than 50,000 pupils will have to be satisfied with part time because of insufficient room.

This is a good time to try to impress upon the boys and girls of Boston that education is the greatest thing in the world.

Within the last few days you have doubtless heard some one say: "Flying through the air as those men do it at Atlantic is the greatest thing in the world." A few months ago when the lives of scores were threatened on the big steamship Republic off the Massachusetts coast and the ship was saved through wireless, you heard it declared: "Wireless telegraphy is the greatest thing in the world." You have heard the same enthusiastic remark about other great inventions and discoveries.

But, boys and girls, all of these things are the result of development of the mind—of education, just such as is offered in the Boston public schools.

When John T. Trowbridge of Boston wrote the humorous poem, "Darius Green and his flying machine," forty years ago he thought he was breaking a record in audacious fiction. Yet the venerable author of that poem saw men fly without falling at Atlantic, as the result of the training of the minds and the development of the human brain during the past forty years.

Boys, don't quit school unless it is an imperative necessity. You can't see the value of this admonition now—you are not expected to do so—but you will later in life.

Many of the reasons why boys quit school before they should are trivial. But not all of them are. Many boys are practically forced out of school because they fall behind the requirements in their marks. This is partly the fault of the boys, but not all their fault by a good deal.

Boys should be accorded credit for mental effort as well as mental accomplishment. There are many boys in school who have done more real studying and yet have fallen below the limit of requirement than some of those who have found it perfectly easy to get a long string of A's. The boy with the A's goes through with a rush while the boy with the D's drops out when, as a matter of fact, he has done as much mental work as his more fortunate schoolmate.

Here is a direction along which the school teacher should work for the good of the pupil. They should keep in mind that the boys who have made good in the "world's great field of battle" didn't always stand at the head of the class, if they ever reached that distinction.

On the other hand it is foolish to think that teachers can pour an education into a boy like one would pour water into a funnel. The boy has got to help. And more than that, the mother and father of the boy have got to help.

What Boston needs right now probably more than anything else in connection with our public schools is a heartier co-operation between parents and teachers. Parents should visit the schools frequently and talk with teachers about their children. Teachers will welcome such help. That is the only way parents can learn just what their boys and girls are doing. The card containing the marks that is brought home once a month does not show but a very little of what parents should know.

Taking it all in all, boys and girls of Boston are fortunately situated. They have splendid schools, plenty of seats, and an educational atmosphere that is not surpassed any place on earth.

The Seven Ages of Aviating

By MORTON BIRGE

All the world's a-flying,
And all the men and women merely aviators.
They have their ascents and their descents;
And one man in his time makes many trips,
His flights being seven. At first the infant,
Staring with wonder at the big machine,
And then the whining schoolboy, with his blue-prints
And shining morning face, creeping like snail
To the aviation school. And then the lover,
Winging like a butterfly, with engine tuned
Unto a love-sick melody. Then a soldier
Full of aviation terms and beard flowing in the breeze;
Dropping bombs, sudden and quick in flight,
Seeking aerial reputation
Even in the cyclone's mouth. And then the justice,
With good tape measure and binoculars,
With eyesight keen and peering to the sky,
Full of new rules and aviation instances;
And so he judges contests. The sixth age shifts into the lean and hungry has-been, the man who made big flights and Talks about them yet. His aviating's done. His motor motes no more. He scarce would dare to skid an hundred yards. Last flight of all
That ends this aviation life, is second biplanism, sans engine, sans wings, sans control—ready for the eternal hangar.
